Farm City Programs Share Insight

FREDERICKSBURG (Lebanon Co.) — Dairy producers are apparently well on their way to gaining a closer ally — the president of Hershey International, a division of Hershey Foods.

And a milk producer who sells to Hershey Foods can expect to get a better understanding into what happens to his milk after it leaves the farm, and why.

It's all a result of one small part of the annual state wide Farm-City Week program.

Every year, in many Pennsylvania counties urbanites and rural dwellers extend welcomes to each other, both out of curiosity and out of a need to close the gap between surviving directly off of the earth and nature and making a living in the multitude of offshoot enterprises.

The official Farm-City Week always starts the Friday before Thanksgiving and extends through the holiday. The state program is observed that week, but many programs are conducted throughout the year, with open farms, tours, mall events, and job exchanges.

Local programs are announced through local media and most are announced through the Lancaster Farming farm calendar.

Lebanon County's Farm-City Week program, coordinated through a committee of the county's Chamber of Commerce, has won state recognition for having a top-notch program for the past three years.

This year's program follows the same award-winning format as in previous years, but every year the

State Grange Honors Members At Convention

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Members of the Pennsylvania State Grange took a break from the business of their annual convention to honor one of their own.

Mary Jane Kent, Wind Ridge, Pa., was named "Granger of the Year," on Tuesday at the Jaffa Mosque in Altoona during the Great Granger Banquet. Kent was honored with a plaque for her dedication to both the Grange and the community. This award is one of the highest honors bestowed upon members.

The presentation was part of the State Session where more than 500 delegates gathered together to discuss and vote on resolutions concerning rural and agricultural issues that will direct Grange policy for the years to come.

Besides holding a number of offices in the Grange, Kent is involved in a number of community activities, including Greene County United Way, American Red Cross, Richhill Township Volunteer Fire Department Auxiliary, Greene County Democratic Women, and the Greene County Fair Board.

Also a part of the banquet was the honoring of county representatives and a speech by Dick Jackman, former correspondent for the "Chicago Tribune" and "United Press." Jackman, a consultant to industry and government on public communications, told the Grange members to make sure they can answer three questions: Do you like who you are? Do you like what you do? Do you like where you do it?

Policy makers need to appreciate and support agriculture year round, not just at Farm Show time, according to Sen. Robert Jubelirer, who spoke before the more than 500 delegates gathered at the Pennsylvania State Grange Convention.

Sen. Jubelirer and Secretary of Agriculture Boyd Wolff spoke at WILLOW VALLEY (Lancaster Co.) — A chicken squacked greetings to the record crowd that gathered for the annual Lancaster County Poultry Association banquet held at Willow Valley Convention Center on October 29.

"I just wanted to get you in the poultry spirit," said Tom Pantano, president of the Association, as he pulled off his chicken mask.

As Pantano reviewed the Association's events of the past year, the crowd of 500 found they had a lot to crow about.

The Association's poultry booth at the Ephrata Fair recorded an all-time high with gross sales of $9,000 that netted a profit of $4,602. Clair and Shirley High, who oversee the event, reported items sold included 425 turkey barbecue sandwiches, 300 gallons of chicken corn soup with 325 pounds of chicken in it, 1,200 chicken breast sandwiches, and 25 pounds of red beet eggs.

Other events hailed as successful include the Poultry Progress Day, held March 7 at the Farm and Home Center, which is the largest poultry event in the Northeast, and the 4-H embryology project that Zoann Parker, 4-H Extension agent, offered in 200 classrooms this past year

Lancaster County Poultry Queen Michele High and Alternate Marlene Enck reported on promotional activities. Scholarships of $500 and $300 respectively were awarded to the two queens.

The Association elected three new directors to serve three-year terms on the board. Representing the allied industry is Mark Lovett

The Lancaster County Poultry Association elected Randy Clugston, left, and Donald Brubaker, center, to serve on the board that is headed by Tom Pantano, president.

Nearly 3,000 Farmers Attend Co-op Meeting

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Managing Editor

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — "We think the next 12 months will be better for Northeast agriculture and Agway will benefit, since agriculture is our major business," said William Hiller, Agway president and CEO, who spoke Thursday at the 27th annual meeting here at the state fairgrounds.

Agway is a large cooperative owned by 91,000 farmers. Hiller called the cooperative's consolidated operating results "disappointing." However, from a strategic point of view, he said the year was somewhat more rewarding because it allowed Agway to be positioned for the future.

Hiller reported that internally managed businesses had flat sales of $2 billion, with before-tax earnings of $7.2 million. Consolidated sales and revenues including Curtice Burns Foods, Inc. and H. P. Hood, Inc., were down slightly at $3.5 billion with a bottom line that showed an after-tax loss of $6.4 million for the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1991.

Hiller blamed the drop of producer milk prices by 30 percent from last August to April, the recession, the unusually warm winter that depressed the heating oil business, and the drought of spring and summer as the reasons for the disappointing financial year.

"Agway remains a strong farmer cooperative with substantial reserves and is committed to serving Northeast agriculture," Hiller said. "We expect improved earnings in the current year as farm income improves and our cost reduction efforts take effect.

Tuesday, October 29, 1991

Prices continued to edge lower. Trading activity was light as most buyers were cautious and usually worked from hand to mouth. Raw materials increased in their availability but breakers were cautious and limited receipts to actual needs. Floor stocks were adequate to handle current buyer interest.

OPEN HOUSE

FRIDAY - NOV. 15 - 10:30 A.M. - 2:30 P.M.

Hickok Enterprises and Pennfield Feeds cordially invite cattle finishers or those interested in finishing dairy beef to see Hickok Enterprises all new partially slatted beef growing barn. Hickok Enterprises has built this 400 head facility to produce high quality Dairy Beef Steers that weigh 400-500 lbs. for sale to beef finishers. These calves have been raised on the Tend-R-Leen Dairy Beef Program, are uniform in size and weight, are properly vaccinated, and ready for the Tend-R-Leen finishing program.

The original no-roughage feeding program

Tend-R-Leen:
A Profitable Way to Feed Beef Cattle.

The Tend-R-Leen program is simple and convenient with no complicated formulas. Cattle eat only whole shelled corn, rolled milo or barley supplemented with the Tend-R-Leen formula and mineral.

The Tend-R-Leen program eliminates roughage feeding, expensive storage and processing. There is no grinding; less equipment and labor are needed. And there's up to 50% less manure produced.

The Tend-R-Leen program gets animals to market weight in 12 months or less.

OPINION

Successful Farm Family

In a survey of farmers to find out what they considered to be the most stressful part of their operations, the most frequently given responses were the general economic uncertainty of agriculture; the weather and its effects; the problems of 24-hour togetherness with families and the conflicts between different generations of family members living and working on the farm.

Half of these stresses are family related. Under today's economic pressures, some families become so wrapped up in saving the farm that they forget to nurture one of their most precious and valuable assets--the family.

Good stress managers spend time with their families on a regular basis. Family members should give each other daily emotional support.

Dr. Patricia Tanner Nelson from the University of Delaware extension department says you should help your family notice successes. The human tendency is to focus on failures. But to realize their potential, people need to know when they've succeeded too. We do the best job of capitalizing on our resources when our self-esteem is high.

Strong families manage conflict well. It's a myth that strong families don't fight. They do; they just know how to handle the situation so that after the differences are aired, everyone can quickly make up and be good friends again.

Nothing is better than farming with family. Or worse. Nothing will give you more joy or more pain. The key is to learn to communicate.

First you must learn to say good-by to some things. A lot of things in this life are not fair. A lot of things are out of your control. But if you can't say good-by to the things that are past, you will spend all your energies mentally hanging on to something you can't keep.

To solve problems, you need to forget the past things you cannot change and use your energy to move into new possibilities. The farm family who has this attitude will be successful.

NOW IS THE TIME

To Realize Rodent Control Reduces Salmonella Risk

A recent research study indicates mice may be the major carrier of Salmonella enteritidis (SE) in a chicken house.

The study conducted in New England showed that mice can produce droppings that contain as many as 6,000,000 SE bacteria per pellet.

Rodent control in many poultry farms is not a planned program. Instead it is a haphazard program of replacing bait when rodents become a nuisance to employees.

To effectively control rodents in a poultry house, a program needs to be developed which takes into account the type of rodents present, the type of housing used for the birds, and the availability of other food sources for the rodents.

The most important factor in an effective baiting program is location of bait. Ideally, baits should be placed where the rodent makes its burrow and along the various pathways that they are likely to take during their active period.

An inexpensive bait station may be made from three pieces of 1.5-inch PVC pipe, about one foot in length joined by a T-section for filling.

Read and follow the directions very carefully on any baits you decide to use. With the coming of colder weather, rodents will be moving into buildings. Now is the time to develop and implement your rodent control program.

To Follow Swine Pseudorabies Regulations

Most swine producers should have received a newsletter from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry regarding the recent spread of pseudorabies.

To stop the spread of this serious disease and increase the chance of eradication, all producers must follow the state's swine health rules.

New rules adopted on August 17, 1991 made significant changes relating to the movement of feeder pigs. Producers in quarantined counties who wish to sell feeder pigs intrastate and interstate must comply with one of the following:

- Maintain a qualified pseudorabies-free herd - requires testing 25 per cent of the sow herd quarterly.
- Secure a negative test on all feeder pigs to be marketed.
- Maintain a pseudorabies monitored herd.

This is the simplest approach and requires an annual test of a sample of pigs in the herd. If the feeder pigs are being shipped from a pseudorabies-free county, no testing is required.

Currently in Pennsylvania (October 10, 1991), the quarantined counties are Berks, Bradford, Bucks, Dauphin, Franklin, Lancaster, Northampton, and Susquehanna. To find out more about the new swine health rules, producers should call the Bureau of Animal Industry (717) 783-5301. It will take cooperation by everyone to bring this disease under control.

To Evaluate Corn Hybrids

Are you satisfied with the quality of the corn you harvested this year? Did some hybrids mold more than others?

Did the tips of the ear protrude through the husks and the ear mature in an upright position? These type of ears trap more moisture and are more prone to mold growth.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

TIME TO SAY GOODBYE

November 3, 1991

Background Scripture: Acts 20.

Devotional Reading: 2 Timothy 4:1-8.

Some of the people who telephone me from time to time have never learned to say "goodbye." They tell me what they want to say; they get my response; we finish the conversation — but they seem unable to say that concluding word "goodbye."

I'm not sure why this is so, but I suspect that many people are uncomfortable with bringing something to an end, even when it is obvious that, for all practical purposes, it is over. I have known people who have hung on to relationships that were over and organizations that continued to limp along in agony, even though the organization was already dead. As parents, we may want to hang on to our children long past the point where it is good for either them or us to do so.

The same is true when it comes to saying "goodbye." It is one of the things that I have had to learn as a pastor. There comes a time when you have to leave and break the ties that you have forged. Much as it may hurt, it is part of the rhythm of life to be moving on from time to time. Nothing — no matter how good and pleasurable it may be — is meant to go on forever, at least not on this earth plane.

COME AND GONE

The Church of Jesus Christ may be eternal, but no congregation or denomination was ever intended to last forever. They come into being to fulfill some aspect of God's purpose, but in time, their reason for being is gone and the kindest thing we can do is to let them have a dignified death. This always occurs to me when I read Acts or any of the New Testament letters. Christian congregations are mentioned in places where today there are no longer any churches surviving. Does that mean that the work of Paul and other disciples was in vain? No, these churches did tremendous good while they lasted. But they went "the way of all flesh" and died. Like departed loved ones, we can remember them with affection and appreciation, but we cannot bring them back. Their time has come and gone.

This is what is in Paul's heart as he begins what is to be his last visit to some of these churches. Paul believes that there is to be a change in his life because "the Holy Spirit testifies to me in every city that imprisonment and afflictions await me" (20:23). This is the very first time we learn of these warnings and Paul is not very explicit. All we can tell is that he is convinced God is telling him that imprisonment and affliction lie ahead.

BOUND IN THE SPIRIT

Paul could have reacted in another manner. Because of the warnings, he might have decided to avoid Jerusalem, hide himself, or try to escape from any difficulty with the authorities. Perhaps the churches would have assisted him in this so that they wouldn't have to lose their mentor. Instead, Paul says, "I am going to Jerusalem, bound in the spirit, not knowing what shall befall me there..."

What does Paul mean "bound in the spirit"? I found an interesting parallel between Acts 20:22 and Acts 9:2, where the writer says of the pre-conversion Paul (Saul) that he asked for authority in the synagogues of Damascus "so that if he found any belonging to the Way, men or women, he might bring them bound to Jerusalem". Now Paul is "bound," not by any external authority, but by a conviction deep within himself.

Paul loved his congregations and didn't want to leave them. But, more importantly for him than any of these human ties was his commitment: "If only I may accomplish my course and the ministry which I received from the Lord Jesus." Each of us, whether we realize it or not, is similarly "bound in the spirit." And this is the strongest bond of all — stronger than any other human tie — and that is why we must all learn sooner or later to say "goodbye".

You'll Get Consistent, Risk-Free Performance From New Funk's G® Brand Hybrids

4393 105 Days
4472 110 Days
4530 113 Days
4624 118 Days

New Funk's G brand hybrids deliver consistent performance even under the stress of heat, drought, marginal soils or disease pressures. So you'll get virtually risk-free performance in good years — and in bad years.

Backed by CIBA-GEIGY research

You see, these hybrids are backed by nine years of CIBA-GEIGY Seed Division research. With local testing in growing conditions just like yours. That kind of research produces hybrids capable of standing up to anything mother nature has to offer. Hybrids that maximize your profit potential, while minimizing your risks.

Get complete performance

Plus, you get performance across the board. With big yields. But with 95% or better standability... 25% or less moisture... and intactness ratings under four. And you get all that in the maturity groups you need to spread your risks even more.

Limit your risks

Get risk-free performance on your farm today by calling Hoffman Seeds, Inc. You'll enjoy the peace of mind that comes from planting these new Funk's G brand hybrids.

NATIONAL CORN YIELD CONTEST NCYC

HYBRID SELECTION
HYTEST Territory Managers and Regional Agronomists are trained to select the best variety for your particular growing conditions. They follow up with technical assistance right through harvest time.

PRESIDENTS CHOICE
Each season HYTEST President, Joe Butwin selects a list of favorite varieties after reviewing test plots, demonstration plots and numerous growers' fields. Both old standbys and choice experimentals are often included.

THE 1991 CHOICES ARE:
North
HTX7224-SX-90 Day
HT318-SX-100 Day
HT474-SX-105 Day

South
HT512-SX-108 Day
HTX7728-SX-116 Day
HT744-SX-118 Day

YOUR CHAMPIONSHIP SEASON
Winning championships is great, but more important for you is producing the highest grain and forage yield in the most cost efficient manner. HYTEST hybrid corn seed allows you to do just that! It's been proven season-after-season!

At harvest time be sure to use BIOTAL Silage Inoculant for silage or BIO-STORE for grain to reduce spoilage and nutrient loss.

Jake Chardon, Etazon Nederland

❝ AMS has used CUBBY in England, France, Germany, Spain and Brazil because we respect the cow family We have been involved with exporting maternal brothers to CUBBY, flushing maternal sisters for embryo export and using CUBBY for embryos We are also using ENDEAVOR, CUBBY's maternal brother, for export ❞

Robert Heilman,

Farm Safety Day Set At Oxford Greenline

OXFORD (Chester Co.)—What started out as an idea to promote farm safety at the local level has become a full day of safety events at the Oxford Greenline dealership on Limestone Road.

Bill Cheek said they wanted to promote farm safety in an interesting way, so they contacted area FFA groups. And five groups have responded with teams to compete in a safety contest. The event is their John Deere Safety Day to be held on November 9th starting at 10 a.m.

Oxford Area, Octoraro Area, and Solanco FFA's, and Cecil Co. Vo-Tech, and Chester Co. Vo-Tech schools plan to send teams. The contest will center on a two-hour safety instruction course and a ride and drive course.

In addition, Stihl, a chain saw company, will sponsor a safety program and the Chester County Extension Service will be involved.

At the same time, various fire companies will hold rescue schools on site, and the climax of the day will come when all the various participants work on a simulated rescue of people from an overturned tractor and skid-loader.

Cheek said another part of the safety instruction will involve what family members should do if they are the first at the scene of a farm accident. Often family members are the first persons at an accident on their farm and they need to know what to do for the person in the accident. This program is called the "First Response School," and will be held the Wednesday evening (Nov. 6) prior to the safety day program.

The John Deere Company has made farm safety a major part of their dealer instruction this year, and the event at Oxford Greenline will serve as a model for other dealerships who want to conduct a farm safety program.

"We would especially like to invite our customers and other interested persons to come to both events," Cheek said.

Art Hershey, state representative, will present the merit awards. The Chester Co. Farmers Association has sent out mailings to announce the event.

For more information, contact the dealership at (215) 932-2753.

To get ready for the safety day program, a simulated skid-loader accident was stated at the Oxford Greenline dealership. Surveying the situation are, left to right, dealership staff persons, Wes McCoy, Brian Stoltzfus, Bill Cheek, and Tom Gouge, and Mike Snyder, the area parts manager for Deere and Company.

FOCUS

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association

Pennsylvania DHIA news is presented in FOCUS each week in cooperation with Dixie L. Burris, manager of membership development.

For more information about these news items or the services of DHIA call 1-800-DHI-TEST. The call is free.

DICK BARTH
General Manager
Pennsylvania DHIA

This column has focused on a broad range of issues affecting DHIA members in Pennsylvania. And probably no issue is more important or timely for DHIA than reorganization, what it is, what it means in terms of member service and how members will be affected by it.

In discussions with members across Pennsylvania reservations have been expressed about changing the structure of DHIA and the impact that could have on members' farm operations. For some the issue is controversial; for others it is overdue. But, a subject this important to the future of DHIA should not be avoided just because it is controversial. It needs to be explained, examined and tested.

No single article can do justice to the many complex issues that reorganization involves. So over the next several months we will examine the subject from both sides, pro and con. But first, let's start from the beginning.

WHAT IS REORGANIZATION?

In a nutshell, it is the transformation of DHIA in Pennsylvania from a federated system of 54 local associations and five district associations into a single statewide direct member association.

The primary purpose of this effort is to eliminate weaknesses that are inherent in the federated structure so that the quality of member services can be raised and the variety of them can be increased to meet member needs better.

More specifically, reorganization is needed in order to do something about the following problems:

1. Inequitable service rates between records programs that exist in many counties.
2. Dairymen who are put on waiting lists for membership because there are not enough DHIA supervisors to service them.
3. Poor or non-existent hiring standards that result in DHIA supervisors who are not skilled or motivated.
4. Added expense due to duplication of effort between the state and local associations.
5. Avoiding billing mistakes from complications due to many new services that will be introduced in the next few years.
6. Solving the problems created by high turnover of DHIA supervisors which averages 25 percent each year.
7. Lack of uniform enforcement of official testing rules.
8. Avoiding legal liability for local DHIA board members.
9. Controlling the cost of services in the future.
10. The inability to implement new services uniformly and quickly across the state.

These are big problems stemming primarily from the question of who has and should have authority and responsibility for daily operations.

Of equal importance though is the manner in which members elect their representation and how they control the association through the state board. These issues need to be discussed as well.

Common wisdom says, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it." With that we would agree. But the problems listed above are real and will jeopardize the future existence of DHIA unless they are solved.

Please continue to watch this column. Future articles will examine each of the problems in detail.

ARIS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ARIS allows dairymen and their authorized veterinarians and nutritional consultants to access individual DHIA herd records from a personal computer to the main computer in State College. Call the State DHIA office number listed in the FOCUS column head to learn more about how you can use this unique DHIA service to increase the profitability of your herd and the DHIA records you produce.

Q: I need to buy a modem. What do you recommend?

A: The four things you need to consider are baud rate, compatibility, cost, and location. The baud rate is the speed at which your modem transfers data. Our system supports 1200 and 2400 baud rates. When purchasing a new modem, look for 2400 baud minimum. The modem should be 100 percent Hayes compatible. A decent modem can be purchased for less than $150. And the location, interval versus external, is a matter of personal preference, space limitations in and outside of the computer, and ease of installation.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — This data is pulled from Pennsylvania DHIA's mainframe computer each week. It is a one-week summary representing approximately one-fourth of the herds on test, as they are tested monthly.

Inside View On Effects Of Milk Pricing

Editor's Note: In the third part of a series of investigative reports on milk pricing and the dairy industry, Staffer Vernon Achenbach Jr. talks with Leon Wilkinson, a Chester Co. dairy farmer who is on his second term as a member of the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The current controversy over milk prices has not escaped Leon Wilkinson, a "retired" Chester County dairy farmer who was recently reappointed to the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

Wilkinson, in reporting to the state Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee for his renomination to the PMMB, discussed the problem of the ever narrowing profit margin for milk producers.

However, for all of Wilkinson's insight into the dairy situation, both as a producer, and as a second-term member on the PMMB, he does not profess to know the solution.

"If I could answer that, I wouldn't just be on the milk board," he said.

"Maybe if milk had been on supply-demand years ago instead of, since 1935, on subsidation, we might be in a different situation today. But I hate to lose these young farmers because we sure need them when we get to be 70 years old. And I see how much more they can take than I."

Wilkinson told the board that one of his sons (all his sons are dairymen), who lives in Adams County, said five small dairy farms in that county went out of business already this year because of the combination of drought and extremely low on-farm milk the convention on agricultural and rural issues.

"If agriculture was dependent on state government for all the answers, we would be in serious trouble." Sen. Jubelirer said. "But there are contributions that the ag community can expect from state government."

Funding of ag research for better products and methods, incentives for environmentally beneficial practices and maintaining roads to have better access to markets were just a few of the benefits agriculture can get from state government, according to Jubelirer.

During his speech, Sec. Wolff said Pennsylvania suffered from two major droughts this year, one of rain and the other of revenue from the state's financial crisis. So far, Pennsylvania agriculture has lost $600 million from poor crops.

Wolff also addressed the many different programs the department has worked on this year. The Farmland Protection Program has grown steadily and this year's budget includes the collection of a cigarette tax to benefit this program. From each pack $.02 will be put toward the program. An estimated $20 million is expected to be raised.

Animal health care issue, wetlands, and the formation of an Ag and Rural Youth Organization Grant Program were also high priorities this year.

The delegates also passed a resolution dealing with establishing a restricted account for the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board.

This year's state budget crisis and the recalling of more than $300,000 from the PMMB's budget demonstrates how fragile funding for the board is, according to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania Grange. By working toward legislation that would establish a restricted account, we can be assured that the PMMB will stay in place to regulate milk prices at the retail level, act as an inspecting agent, and audit milk dealers.

Another resolution dealing with establishing a National Health Care program was turned down by the delegates. Instead the members passed a policy statement requesting that National Grange look into the many options for such a program before a policy is adopted.

These resolutions are a few out of the 123 which will come before the delegates this year in Altoona. Resolutions are proposed by local Granges. If they pass during the Session, they become part of the State Grange's policy. Resolutions of national scope are then sent to the National Convention for adoption.

The Pennsylvania State Grange represents more than 35,000 rural Pennsylvanians on issues such as nutrient management, education, wetlands, road maintenance, and health care issues.

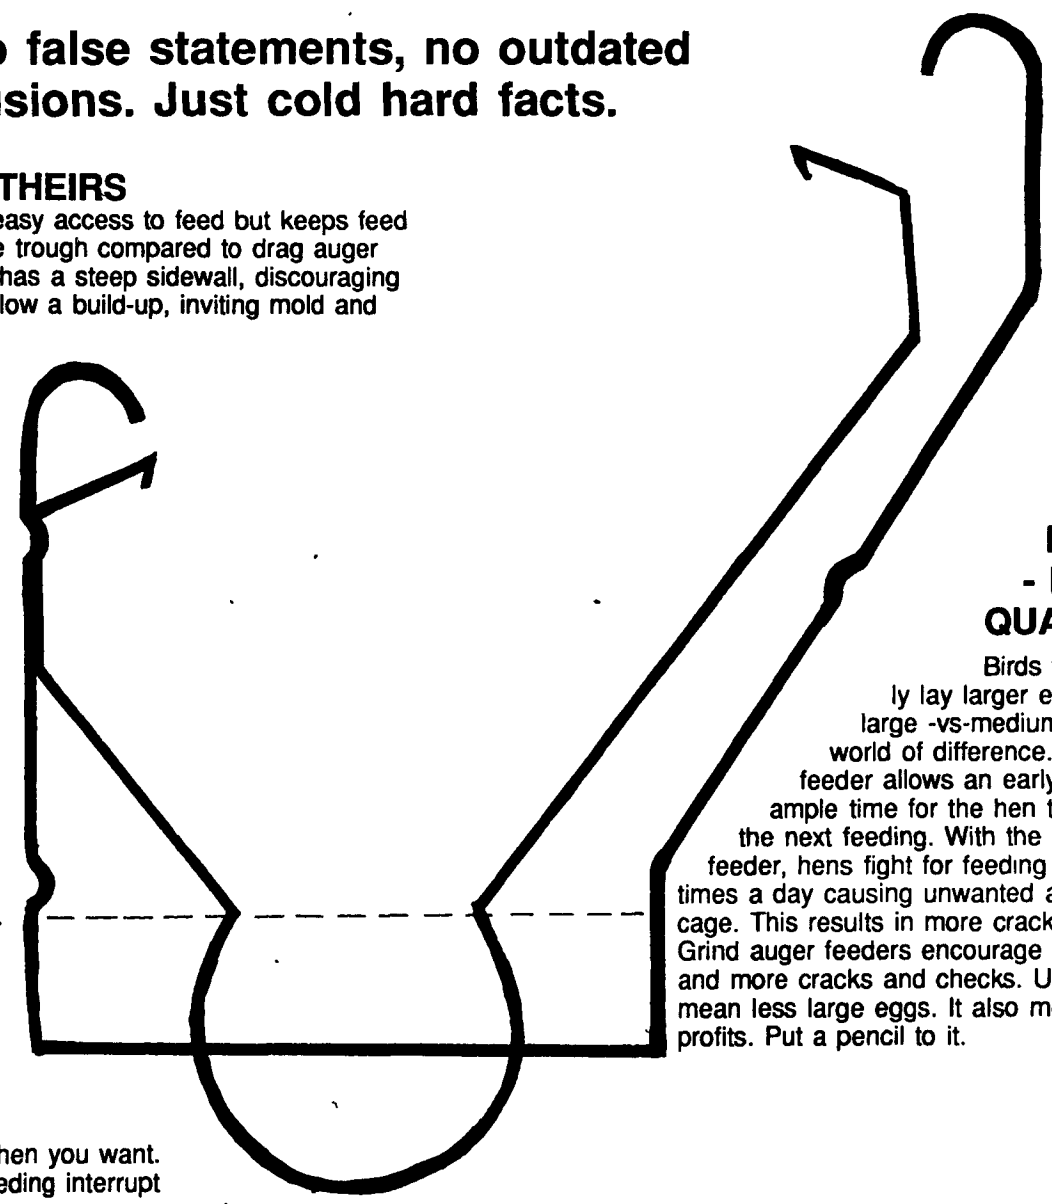
No gimmicks, no false statements, no outdated drawings, no illusions. Just cold hard facts.

DESIGN...OURS AND THEIRS
Our chain feeder trough allows easy access to feed but keeps feed levels further below the lip of the trough compared to drag auger trough. Our chain feeder trough has a steep sidewall, discouraging feed build-up. Their slope can allow a build-up, inviting mold and disease. Our trough is "ribbed" for strength... theirs is built for price alone.



FEEDING SPACE
Actual feeding space with the grind auger is skimpy. In fact our chain feeder has 2½ times more feeding space per bird. This allows the chain feeder to run as few as three times per day while the auger must run eight or more times per day. Chain carries feed and supplies a uniform ration, with no feed waste. With the drag auger, birds turn sideways to eat requiring more length of feeder.

EGG SIZE - EGG QUALITY
Birds that eat properly lay larger eggs. Price on large -vs-medium makes a world of difference. Our chain feeder allows an early feeding, then ample time for the hen to lay before the next feeding. With the drag auger feeder, hens fight for feeding space many times a day causing unwanted activity in the cage. This results in more cracks and checks. Grind auger feeders encourage smaller eggs and more cracks and checks. Under fed birds mean less large eggs. It also means less profits. Put a pencil to it.

FEED CONTROL
Our chain feeding system does not dictate a feeding program. You are in control, feeding as little or as much as you want when you want. Drag auger feeders' frequent feeding interrupt birds during peak laying periods.

REPAIR AND MAINTENANCE
The hardest part of repairing a chain feeder is remembering where you left the hammer and chain breaker tool some months back. With an auger system, the need for a welder, torch and grinder is almost routine. Down time is up, and repair hours and expense rise.

THE TEST OF TIME
Our chain feeder seems never to wear out. Some thirty year old units are still performing, day in and day out. On the other hand, some "short term" grind auger systems are beginning to show their weaknesses. Time is the enemy of the grind auger system. Just a little time.

Most local egg producers have already seen The Real Picture and are rethinking chain -vs- drag auger feeding. If you are feeding with a drag auger system, we invite you to take a better look at The Real Picture. Our goal is to help you make a profit, and chain feeding plays the leading role.

Pot O'Gold Winners Announced

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — For the 19 enterprising youth who purchased animals in the 1988 National Pot O'Gold Sale, the wait has been a long one-- but finally, that wait is over. The records have been completed, the scores tabulated, and the winners selected. The American Jersey Cattle Club proudly announces the 12 winners of the 1991 National Pot O'Gold Production Contest.

Heading the list is Peterson Pal Penelope, a Palmer Fascinator George daughter owned by David Alan Seals, Myrtle Point, Ore. "Penelope" was purchased for $1,900 during the 1988 Western National Pot O'Gold Sale in Salem, Ore. She was consigned by Peterson Brothers, Sebastopol, Calif.

"Penelope's" production credentials include an actual record of 2-1 305 16,290 5.2% 846 3.9% 630 with a standardized yield of 26,527 pounds milk. David will receive $2,058.70 for his win, a solid 108 percent return on his investment.

Juniors between the ages of seven and 19 are eligible to enter the Pot O'Gold Production Contest by purchasing a heifer at one of two national pot o'gold sales; the first at the Western National in September, and the second at the All American in November. Seventeen percent of the selling price of all heifers is returned to the youth in the form of production contest winnings. This year's "pot" of $7,352.53 will be shared by the 12 winners.

The top juniors will receive their checks prior to the Pot O'Gold Sale at the All American, November 9 in Louisville, Ky. Winners from the west coast have already been awarded their checks in conjunction with the Western National Pot O'Gold Sale held September 6 in Puyallup, Wash.

In order to compete, heifers must calve before reaching 30 months of age. The actual first lactation production is adjusted to mature equivalent (305 day, 2x milking, age and month of calving). Adjusted records are then standardized to 3.5 percent fat and 3.2 percent protein. These standardized records are used to determine placings in the contest.

Top 10 winners in the 1991 National Jersey Pot O'Gold Production Contest:

1st - David Alan Seals, Myrtle Point, Ore. - $2,058.70.

2nd - L. Summer Hanford, Marcellus, N.Y. - $1,249.93.

Farm City Programs Share Insight

faces and situations change.

However, some things don't change.

On Wednesday, William Christ, president of Hershey International, was up long before dawn learning the basics of milking registered and grade Ayrshire and Holstein cows at the 200-acre farm of Paul Maulfair.

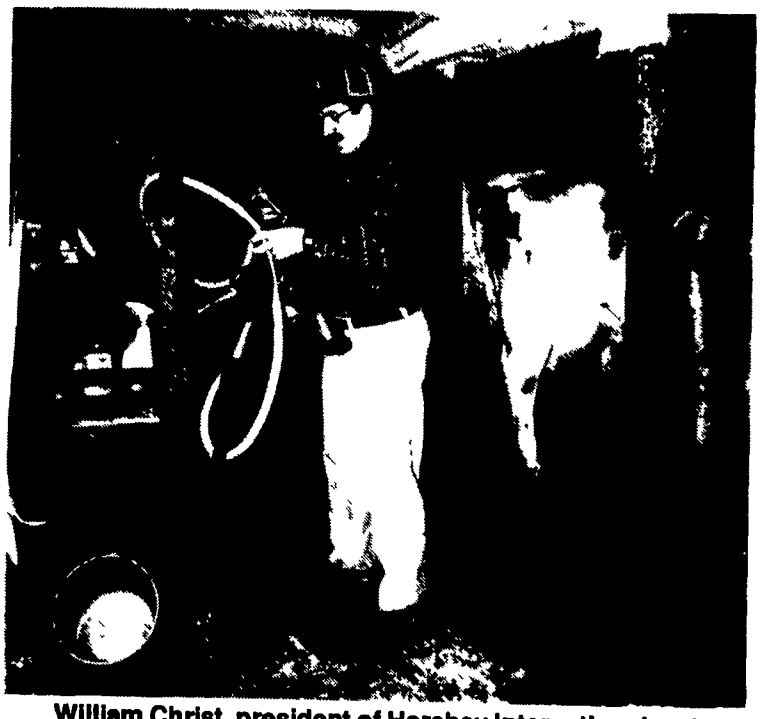
"It was great," Christ said. "I had envisioned trying to do something by hand, which was not what we did. It was very mechanized, and very interesteing, but yet, very detailed in what has to be done, so that the cows don't get infected or spread a disease to the milk or to another cow. So the farmer has to know a lot about a lot of things. It was demonstrated this morning."

Maulfair and his wife Pattie, and father Paul Maulfair, went about the numerous duties required in producing milk.

In addition to the milking and feeding of the milking herd, treating animals, washing milking equipment, Christ got to see and help do things such as harvest corn, feed heifer calves, and feeding a group of steers which Maulfair raises for sale to families for filling their freezers, or for sale at local auction.

There are also the several hogs raised for home use and the small flock of laying hens whose eggs are sold at the farm.

While working the men talked about milk, foreign interest, ongoing projects . . . sharing information about a business which, ties the two men together, though the work at oposite ends of the spectrum of involvement.



William Christ, president of Hershey International, gets a first hand introduction into the milking of cows at the Dale Maulfair farm, as part of the county's Farm-City Week job exchange program.

As president of Hershey International, Christ said, "We're responsible for all the operations of Hershey outside of the United States and Canada. We have chocolate manufacturing facilities in Germany, in Mexico, in the Phillipines, we license in Japan and Korea, and we're in joint venture manufacturing in pasta and biscuits and margareine in Brazil. And we export product made in our plants in the United States to over 40 countries around the world," he said.

Christ said his job entitles about 60 percent traveling abroad on behalf of the country.

Christ said he visits Korea somewhat frequently, and that sparked interest from Paul, who served there in the early 1950s during the Korean Conflict.

While cleaning up from the milking,

Christ seemed comfortable with the experience.

"I've been on farms, but I've never really did anything, they were more of a visit, or something like that," he said, explaining that in his job gets to tour some milk production facilities, but hasn't had a hands-on experience until Wednesday.

However, in his way, Christ is not necessarily a complete tenderfoot.

"I have a little farm, we have horses and my wife raises Cotswold sheep, so I know a little bit about a barn, but I haven't experienced anything like we did today, like cutting corn, and milking. This is all new and very interesting," Christ said.

He said he and his wife live on a 40-acre farmette which they originally purchased because of a 200-year-old house, which they restored.

Christ said that since the property had a barn and pasture, he and his wife bought horses and learned to ride. And then his wife wanted to try to raise sheep.

He said she wanted to raise Cotswold sheep, which he said are considered "endangered" species here in Pennsylvania, for the breed's wool, which is reportedly rated as good for spinning, something he said his wife wants to learn how to do.

But more was apparently going on at the Maulfair farm Wednesday than the getting the cows milk, the cattle fed and taking care of business.

Christ was doing more than going through physical motions, he said he was thinking about the whole business and how it ties together, from a slightly different perspective.

"The interesting thing part about this is — that agriculture, which the largest industry in Pennsylvania, and dairy, which is the major portion of that — the milk that's obtained right here in Lebanon County is being used in Hershey's products that are being sold all over the world.

"So, a little bit of Lebanon County is going outside, and Hershey is one of the largest exporters of products from the state of Pennsylvania," Christ said.

Dale Maulfair supplies milk to Hershey Chocolate USA, which is not one of Christ's divisions, but it's all in the same business family.

Hershey buys milk from about a thousand dairy farms within about a hundred mile radius of the plant in Hershey.

Christ said he got involved in the program last year, as a guest to the county Farm-City banquet and he said he's glad he was asked to participate. "I've thoroughly enjoyed this. I think it's very, very interesting."

On Nov. 12, Christ is to return the favor by taking Dale around the Hershey plant.

"I'm in charge of a division that has all manufacturing facilities outside the United States, so I'm going to take Dale to Hershey headquarters office, show him around, explain what's done there, the export products and the different kinds of wrappings. But I'm also going to take Dale into our milk receiving operation so he will be able to see where his milk goes once the tank truck picks it up (at his farm).

"And we're going to take him through the whole milk processing — we're one of the few manufacturers left who receive fresh milk for chocolate — into the labs to show how milk quality is checked and I plan to take him into some of our developmental labs where we work on products that we use dairy products in.

"So he's going to see the whole nine yards of what happens to milk, plus, then we'll take him through the rest of the plant and show him how the milk gets into the chocolate and eventually into a finished product," Christ said.

Dairymen Honors High Quality Producers

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Forty member-producers with outstanding milk quality were honored by the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc., during the cooperative's annual meeting here last week.

Quality production award winners were recognized at three quality levels, based on honor roll standards established by the cooperative in 1964. Honor roll requirements include a monthly Standard Plate Count less than 5,000, somatic cell count less than 500,000, and no antibiotics or suspensions. Honor roll standards further require a sediment level of excellent or good, freeze point of .530 or better, and milk shipments through the entire month.

Three member-producers who qualified for the honor roll the entire 12 months of 1990, and who scored 99 or 100 on all inspections, were honored with the Excellent Award, Dairymen's highest quality standard achievement.

Recipients of Dairymen's 1990 Excellent Awards were Armacost Farms, Inc., Cletus and Austin Armacost; Robert and Norma Grove; and Walbert Farms, Ltd., Albert and Tracey Hurline.

Members who achieved the cooperative's second highest standards level, honor roll status each of the 12 months and inspection scores of 92 or better, received the Gold Production Award.

Twelve members were honored at the Gold Quality Level for 1990, including the Gary Brauning family, Harold and Sharon Carbaugh, Jacob and Lena Fisher, and Mark and Donna Garber.

Also, Melvin Glatfelter, Clement and Donna Haldeman, Benjamin and Emma Lapp, Harold and Joyce Raubenstine, David and Vesta Reifsnyder, Douglas and Rose Smith, Wenger Farms, Samuel E. Jr. and Nelson Wenger, and Katherine and Talmadge Wilson, Jr.

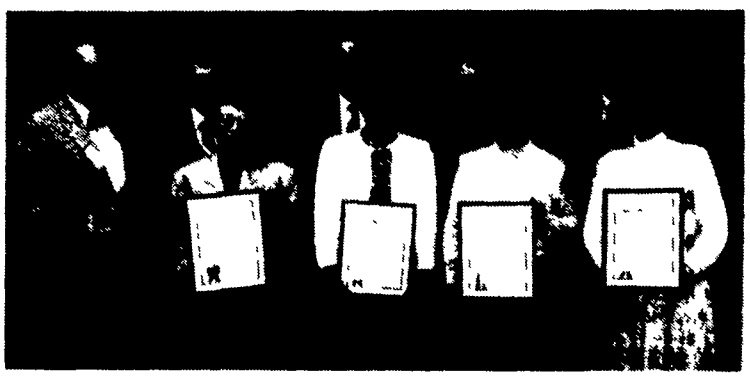
Silver quality awards are presented to members qualifying 11 out of the 12 months and whose standard plate count remained under 50,000 in the non-qualifying month, and whose inspection scores are 92 or higher.

Twenty-five members achieved the 1990 silver quality award level. Silver recipients include Sterling Alban, Dale Barshinger, Jacob, Jr. and Malinda Beiler, Belmont Farms, Inc., O.B. Long and C.M. Holtz, Donald Brechill, Brower and Brower, Donald, Lisa and Sarah Brower, and Claude and Kevin Cooper.

Silver awards also went to Noah and Annie Fisher, Nevin Hersch, Paul I. Jr. and Ruth Hock, Roy and Susie Kinsinger, Henry and Vernie Kinsinger, Locust Ayr Farm, Michael and Anita Haines, Meadow Lake Farm, C. Dewitt and Ruth Tharpe, Rivervales Landmark Farm, Leonard Queitzsch, W. Wiley and J. Walter Rutledge.

Additional silver quality recipients were Glenville Shade, Harry and Anna Rae Siegman, David Spencer, Kevin and Keith Stahl, Noah and Sarah Summy, Stephen Trout, W. Kenneth Vansant, Jr., Jeffrey, Tammy, James and Lorraine Wivell and David and Esther Yoder.

Dairymen, Inc., is a farmer-cooperative headquartered in Louisville, Ky., and owned by more than 4,000 dairy producers across the Southeast. The Middle Atlantic division of Dairymen, Inc., with offices in Sykesville, Md., includes member-producers from Delaware, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia.



Recipients from Dairymen's Gold quality award included, from left, Gary Brauning, Harold and Joyce Raubenstine, David and Vesta Reifsnider, Clement and Donna Haldeman, and Harold and Sharon Carbaugh.

Dairymen's highest quality recognition, the Excellent Award, was presented to, from left, Austin Armacost of Armacost Farms, Norma and Robert Grove, and Tracey Hurline for Walberth Farms.

AJCC Recongizes Youths' Jersey Production

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — Farwest Samson Cynthia, a nine-year-old Jersey owned by Stephanie Samson, Emmett, Idaho, won top honors in the 1990 National Youth production Contest. The contest is sponsored annually by The American Jersey Cattle Club and recognizes junior-owned Jerseys with top production records. Records are calculated on a mature equivalent basis (305 day, 2x milking, age and month of calving) and ranked by pounds protein.

"Cynthia" competed against 63 entries from 17 states. The top 15 records, which were ranked on m.e. pounds protein, averaged 787 lbs. protein, with all 63 entries averaging 606 lbs. protein. "Cynthia's" winning record is 9-1 305 24,800 4.9% 1,222 3.7% 916 giving her an m.e. of 24,304-- 1,222-- 916. "Cynthia", Excellent-90%, is a daughter of Gramhil Leader Sophia Samson. Her Predicted Producing Ability (PPA) includes +1,814M, +146F, and +95P.

The second-place winner is owned by Phillip A. Hansen, Canby, Ore. GR Cream Creek Chief Senorita, a 3-yr.-old daughter of Yankee FW Chief, completed a winning record of 3-6 305 21,640 4.7% 1,010 3.6% 777. Her mature equivalent is 24,020-- 1,101-- 847. "Senorita", Very Good-86%, boasts a PPA of +4,043M, +120F, and +118P.

Proceeds from the National Heifer Sale are used to provide awards for the owners of the top 15 cows in the contest. Youth between the ages of nine and 19 on January 1 of the contest year are encouraged to maintain production records on their animals and enter them in the contest. Entries are due in the AJCC office March 1 each year.

National Dairy Board Focuses On Chocolate

ARLINGTON, Va. — The Milk Work Group, consisting of the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board as well as several other state and regional dairy organizations, is gearing up to capture more market-share for America's dairy producers in the months ahead.

Consumer research shows that chocolate milk is regarded more as a snack or dessert than a mealtime beverage; therefore, it will complement rather than cannibalize the white milk market, which finds most of its consumers during meals.

"Chocolate milk is a beverage with a uniquely satisfying, chocolatey taste that's a fun break from other types of snacks and beverages," said George de Jager, head of the National Dairy Board's Marketing and Advertising department.

Those characteristics will be the message in a cooperative advertising effort by the Milk Work Group members, de Jager said, targeting children and teens.

The National Dairy Board is to use producer funds for television advertising nationally, promoting both powder-mixed and ready-to-serve chocolate milk, while developing supplemental radio advertising for use by interested state and regional promotion organizations.

In-store advertising as well as tie-in promotion with brands on a regional basis offer additional opportunities for expansion of chocolate milk support.

The campaign is scheduled to begin airing in mid-March.

Introducing Synchro-Max 2000™.

Recently there has been a lot written about the advantages of ration balancing based on Rumen Available Protein and Rumen Available Carbohydrate (RAP/RAC).

Now Agway has taken the RAP/RAC concept a giant step further with the development of the Synchro-Max 2000 line of dairy feeds, a unique and comprehensive feed and ration balancing program, proven to increase milk production at minimal increased cost.

Field demonstrations at 13 Agway-member farms with RHA's of 20,000 lbs. and more showed an average production increase of more than 3 lbs. per cow, per day. At an increased feed cost* of just one cent per cow, per day!

The critical ingredient? Synchronization. For maximum efficiency and nutrient utilization, it's critically important that the right amounts of protein and carbohydrate energy be available in the rumen at the right time. Using a proprietary database of innovative feed technology, your Agway Farm Enterprise Salesperson will first determine the RAP/RAC values of your forages. Then he will design the correct Synchro-Max 2000 feed program for your farm. For maximum production and profitability.

Ask your Agway Farm Enterprise Salesperson about Synchro-Max 2000, available exclusively from Agway. Whatever your herd's RHA, he has the feeds, technology and input to improve your output.

Effects Of Milk Pricing

prices.

"It's mostly the young ones," Wilkinson said. "The old (dairymen) are selling out because they don't want the hassle any longer, but the young ones are selling out because they have to."

Wilkinson said the loss of the young farmers is especially disquieting because they are the generation who are the next link in the continuum of milk production in Pennsylvania.

If they don't survive or are disenchanted with the dream of operating a small dairy as a livelihood, Wilkinson predicted there will not be anyone to come back to the farm, even if profits improve.

"I've never seen a farmer yet who couldn't go out and find a job the next day. The feed company or somebody will hire them because they don't mind working long hours.

"I don't think we will see the real true impact of this for maybe five or six years down the road, when the rest of the 60-year-old farmers are (retired)," he said.

Working under the federal price support system, Wilkinson has tried to improve conditions. He is credited with pushing to get the current $1.05 over-order premium established for Pennsylvania producers. He has also worked to encourage adjoining states' governments to follow suit.

He said the recent failure of the Rogers-Allen Act in New York comes as a set-back to stabilizing the dairy industry.

"We had hoped to have a three-state (region) that would have some control of milk prices so that milk going back and forth to one another would have similarity in price.

"All of our northern tier producers generally go into the New York market. And it needs that feeling of togetherness . . . We need that sort of New York-New Jersey and Pennsylvania pricing."

Wilkinson is credited with being a major influence in getting the Pennsylvania over-order premium because he had called for a public hearing in 1978 to assess the effects of a drought on the survival of small dairy farms.

Prior to that, a public hearing on the state's milk industry had not been called for 23 years.

More or less following Wilkinson's precedent, now PMMB President Donald Lanius called for a drought hearing in late August to reassess the dairy production economy.

"We received testimony, but we didn't make any decision," Wilkinson said, adding that the board would not make a decision, "Until we see how our farmers are going to fare this fall."

The reason for the hesitancy of the board to quickly decide any change in the over-order premium reflects its goal of making improvements, not quick fixes.

The board members do not want to aggravate the problem even more, or to merely shift the problem to another aspect of the industry, which would ultimately still affect the milk productionist.

"We want to be sure we are doing the right thing. After you make one of these decisions, you don't go out and change it the next day," Wilkinson said.

In addition to the frustrations of the existing federal system, the uncertain direction of milk policy in Washington, the lack of a no-one-gets hurt solution, Wilkinson said he is frustrated with the Casey administration's deliberate financial hamstringing of the PMMB.

According to Wilkinson, about $2.3 million is budgeted for the PMMB, with $1.3 million of that generated by the agency through the collection of fees for licenses and permits it issues.

Part of those fees are collected from hauling fees. Haulers must pay the PMMB a certain amount of money to cover costs of regulating the haulers, to make sure everyone is conducting business to standards.

Wilkinson said haulers previously were charged about $50 per day to haul milk, no matter the volume. Now haulers pay a half cent per hundred pounds of milk hauled. The cost is passed directly to the dairyman, in most cases deducted from his milk check. Hauling fees vary depending on company.

It's an extra expense that dairymen do not need with profit margins so low, however, according to Wilkinson, what makes it worse is that it is, in effect, being used to support the state budget deficit, not the dairy industry.

Two years ago, the entire dairy industry, through its professional organizations, lobbied and got increased fees so that the PMMB could have more operating funds.

Initially, dairy representatives sought more of the general fund (general income tax revenues) for the PMMB.

But when Casey said that it was impossible to give more money due to limited state funds and a difference in priorities, the majority of the dairy industry accepted an "understanding" with Casey that the self-imposed fee increase would be instituted, as long as the same amount of state funds ($950,000) continued to be devoted to the PMMB.

Legislators have said the dairy industry is one of the few, it not the only industry to ever seek better state government through increasing its own fees.

However, as soon as the fee increase was signed into law, Casey pulled the rug out from under the PMMB and cut state funding to the PMMB.

Furthermore, all funds generated by the PMMB through licensing go directly into the state's general fund and are only given to the PMMB at the discretion of the Office of the Budget. Which has not been giving the money to the agency.

Wilkinson told the Senate committee that refusals to provide operating funds and cuts meted out by the Casey administration has made the milk marketing board operate from paycheck to paycheck.

For the first six months of the 1990-91 state fiscal year, especially in January, the board was threatened with having to shut down, Wilkinson said.

"One morning the secretary called me and said, Mr. Wilkinson, there is $18 left in the fund, what do we do now?"

However, legislation has been introduced in the Legislature and has received wide support which would remove the governor's control of any funds allocated to or raised by the PMMB.

In the meantime, however, the funds are not made readily available to the PMMB.

There are also limits to what the PMMB can do, Wilkinson said. It regulates only the minimum prices of fluid milk.

After meeting with the Senate committee, Wilkinson related the dairy industry problem through his own experiences.

He said that Wilkinson Farms milk is sold in the Philadelphia, Delaware, and New Jersey region, an area where store prices went up and didn't come down with farm prices.

"We (the PMMB) only control the minimum price to the farmer and the minimum price from the processor to the store. We found that, over the past years, the stores kept their price within 5 cents of the minimum.

"They knew best what their market demanded, according to the economic climate or the type of clientele they were serving. But this year has been a little different.

"During the black Thursday in the Wisconsin-Minnesota area, the cheese market, they stopped buying milk and milk prices dropped back about $2.50 per hundredweight.

"They have a product they don't have to move everyday, but the farmers storage has to be moved every day or every other day, so the cheese people have a little more control of the market place than we do.

"The milk went up in price (in stores) when the farmers' price went up, a year and a half ago, and then our price dropped about five months later, but the stores never responded to the drop.

"Milk in the Philadelphia Area 1 and down on to Willmington, Delaware, is running higher now than it was when milk was in deficit and the on-farm price was high.

"You have to remember, when milk went to $15 to $16 that was only for Class I. But that is only paid on 45 percent of production we get the low price on the rest, even though it's all the same grade milk.

"At one time we used to get (paid on a basis of) 85 to 90 percent Class I and 15 percent Class II (use).

"At that time, you could give them (the dealers) that 15-percent flexibility for the time of the week or the holdiay season, or the up and down demand and supply.

"But today, with the drop in the

FALL SALE UPDATE

Doebler's holds line on alfalfa prices

by Willard Jones

Leave it to a farmer to keep us on our toes.

Ads for Doebler's Turn the Clock Back Sale this fall listed discounts on hybrid seed corn but not a word about our alfalfas. And he wanted to know why.

"It wasn't an oversight," I explained. "We just didn't have all our seed costs and couldn't come up with a price."

But now we have. And the news is all good.

The price holds firm at $163.80 per 50 pound bag for both Starmaster and Precedent.

And you can reduce that price to $147.42, a 10% discount. Just pay cash by November 16.

More good things start happening when you seed Doebler's alfalfas.

Both Precedent and Starmaster give you vigorous plants with big ton capability.

Both carry superior winter hardiness ratings.

Both have built-in resistance to the Big Five alfalfa diseases, with Precedent also resistant to a new killer, Aphanomyces.

And both have the extra protection of Apron seed treatment packed in every bag.

Now that's making hay, 1990's style.

I'm Willard Jones, Doebler's sales manager. Good things really start happening when you seed Doebler's alfalfas.

PFA Prepares For Annual Meeting

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — The State Policy Development Committee of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association (PFA) met this week at the Harrisburg Host Hotel, Harrisburg, to prepare policy recommendations for the upcoming annual business meeting of the statewide farm organization.

The state committee, comprised of policy development committee chairmen from PFA's 54 county farmers' associations, will review approximately 400 proposed policy resolutions submitted from the local associations.

"The recommendations represent the grass roots feelings of our members about the best ways to deal with important farm issues," said Guy Donaldson, vice president of PFA and chairman of the State Policy Development Committee.

The committee will consolidate the recommendations into about 120 policy recommendations for consideration by Voting Delegates at PFA's 41st annual meeting, Nov. 18-20 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center, Hershey.

National Dairy Board Hires Two

ARLINGTON, Va. — To manage product research and public relations efforts more effectively at the National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, Barbara Blakistone was recently hired as director of Dairy Foods Research, and Thelma Schoonmaker was hired as manager of Industry Communications.

Blakistone is to oversee product and nutrition research at the NDB's six research centers located at Utah State, North Carolina State and Cornell universities, as well as at the universities of Minnesota, Wisconsin and California at Davis.

The recipient of a bachelor's degree in biology at the University of North Texas and master's and doctorate degrees in food science at North Carolina State University, Blakistone was most recently manager of food technologies at The Mead Corporation. There, she provided technical expertise in the food packaging area.

Prior to that, she was a research associate at International Paper Company.

She is a member of the Society of Sigma Xi and the American Society for Microbiology, and chairperson of the Food Packaging Division of the Institute of Food Technologists.

Schoonmaker, as communications manager, is to keep dairy producers and the media abreast of National Dairy Board activities including product research, and advertising and promotion through press releases, quarterly reports, radio broadcasts and other communications vehicles.

A graduate of the University of Illinois with a four-year degree in agricultural communications, Schoonmaker comes to the National Dairy Board after serving as assistant editor at Pro Farmer, where she wrote commodity market analysis for electronic networks. She is a member of Women in Communications, Inc.

The National Dairy Promotion and Research Board, composed of 36 dairy farmers, was established by the Dairy and Tobacco Adjustment Act of 1983 to develop and administer a coordinated program of promotion, research and nutrition education to strengthen the dairy industry' s position in the marketplace. This effort is financed by America's dairy farmers.

Foraging Around

QUALITY -- WHAT'S IT WORTH?

As we head into this winter many hay mows are already partially empty. And while dairymen are making every effort to stretch short hay supplies we can be sure that over the next several months there will be a big movement of hay into the eastern market. And that brings up the perennial question, "What price do you put on quality when you're buying hay?"

Quality -- What Is It? What's it Worth?

Quality hay can be described in many ways. It's hay that contains an abundance of nutrients, minerals and vitamins, is leafy, free of foreign material, shows no sign of weathering, and has a bright green color. But it's also true that any definition of high quality hay must include high digestibility and high intake by the consuming animal, with metabolic efficiency a third important factor.

What's quality worth to the dairyman? D.L. Mertens, research scientist at the US Dairy Forage Research Center at Madison, Wisconsin, predicts very simply that high quality forage will be the key to survival for dairymen in the future.

That's a strong statement, but Mertens has plenty of facts to support his belief. For example, in one Wisconsin study, potential milk production per cow per day dropped from nearly 53 pounds (hay quality-- 71% digestible energy, 42 lbs. dry matter intake) to under 12 pounds as quality declined (hay quality-- 61% digestible energy, 25 lbs. dry matter intake). Put this in terms of dollars and it adds up to big bucks.

Quality -- How do you Measure it?

Visual inspection, to be sure, is still the most common method used in the Eastern US for assessing quality and price when either selling or buying. But the development of new rapid methods of measuring quality, such as Near Infrared Reflectance Spectroscopy (NIRS) has already had a major impact on marketing hay in many areas of the US.

And with good reason. As I've reported to you before, in Wisconsin and Minnesota Quality Tested Hay Auctions have become very popular. And these have come about because of the introduction of NIRS equipment, usually in mobile units, as a rapid method of measuring the quality of a hay lot prior to sale, plus the grading of hay according to the NIRS results.

The hay grading system used in the Wisconsin and Minnesota auctions is patterned after the system proposed several years ago by the American Forage and Grassland Council. It includes relative feed value (RFV), which is a value developed from acid detergent fiber (ADF), and neutral detergent fiber (NDF) tests and compares one forage to another based on feed value and predicted intake.

Quality Tested Hay Auctions can no longer be considered a new concept in the 2 states mentioned above. And data from quality tested hay auctions in Minnesota for the 1990-91 winter season again show how this approach established a price-quality standard.

For example, during the 1990-91 season 545 load-lots of hay were received at 5 locations. The average prices and qualities of hay sold by quality standards at these auctions is shown in the chart.

Quality Standard	Number of Loads	Ave. Crude Protein	Ave. RFV	Ave. Price/Ton
Prime	79	21.9	168	$111.72
1	184	20.0	137	93.37
2	156	17.3	113	69.61
3	94	15.3	95	50.95
4	24	12.6	82	37.48
5	8	10.3	70	32.06

In their analysis of in excess of 1850 load-lots over several years Minnesota workers determined that, overall, hay with an RFV value of 100 averaged about $62 per ton. And while there was considerable variation, in general, their findings suggested hay to be worth nearly $1.00 per point of RFV index. Thus, a lot of hay with a RFV of 130 would be worth about $5.00 per ton more than hay with a RFV of 125.

What is quality worth? Obviously you must make that decision for your situation. But the facts tell me that quality is worth dollars. And as I view it, a forage analysis of a properly taken sample, along with a visual appraisal, is your surest way of determining hay quality and thus its worth.

Incidentally, this year's Forage Conference sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council will be held November 26 at the Lancaster Host Conference Center, Lancaster, PA. Dr. Larry Chase, Cornell University Animal Scientist, will lead off the conference that morning on the subject "Understanding Forage Quality." Hope to see you there!

Jersey Youth Recognized In Achievement Contest

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio — The American Jersey Cattle Club has announced its top ten winners in the 1990 National Jersey Youth Achievement Contest. These youngsters represent the cream of the crop in Jersey youth across the nation. This award, which has been presented for the past 33 years, recognizes youth who excel in managing and breeding their Jerseys, actively participate in breed functions, and show exceptional leadership skills.

To be eligible for the contest, juniors must own one or more registered Jerseys and be between the ages of nine and 19 on January 1 of the contest year. Juniors are nominated by their state Jersey associations.

Kimberly A. Billman of West Salem, Ohio, captured first place in this year's contest. She is the daughter of Jim and Linda Billman and placed eighth in last year's Achievement Contest. Kim spent two years at a small liberal arts college before transferring to The Ohio State University where she is pursuing a dual major in agricultural communications and dairy science. Kim has been active on her family farm where she owns 15 registered Jerseys. She also gained dairy experience as a summer intern for NOBA Inc.

Kim's wide range of activities include serving Wayne County (Ohio) as dairy princess and being first alternate 1988 National Jersey Jug Queen. She received her State FFA Farmer Degree in 1988 and was named the Outstanding Jersey Girl in Ohio, a title she shared with another young woman, the same year. Kim was an active member of 4-H and participated in dairy quiz bowl and dairy judging contests.

In college, Kim is a member of the Buckeye Dairy Club and will co-chair the catalog committee for the school's annual dairy sale. She is also a member of the Agricultural Communicators of Tomorrow. She plans to incorporate her love for the dairy cow with her communications skills after graduating from Ohio State.

Kim and the nine other winners will be presented cash awards totaling $2,000 at the Junior Banquet and Fun Fest, November 9, following the All American Junior Jersey Show in Louisville, Ky.

CONSIDER YOUR FEED CONVERSION BONUS
ULTRAFLO OUT-PERFORMS CHAIN

Chore-Time's ULTRAFLO® feeder for layers, pullets and breeders

We have probably been too modest up to now about the merits of our new generation ULTRAFLO® cage feeder vs. the old style chain feeders some of our competitors are still trying to sell you. In fact, the only negative comments about our feeder come from our competition, not our customers. So we would like to point out the bare facts:

FEED SAVINGS: On-farm results show a feed savings of ½ lb. per 100 birds per day – over $10,000 per year savings on a 100,000-bird house Year after year

TROUBLE-FREE DESIGN: Our feeder has only two moving parts – the one-piece auger plus each drive wheel; their chain has more. Our corners are heavy 12 ga. zinc plated tubing for long life; their corners have a reputation for trouble and short life.

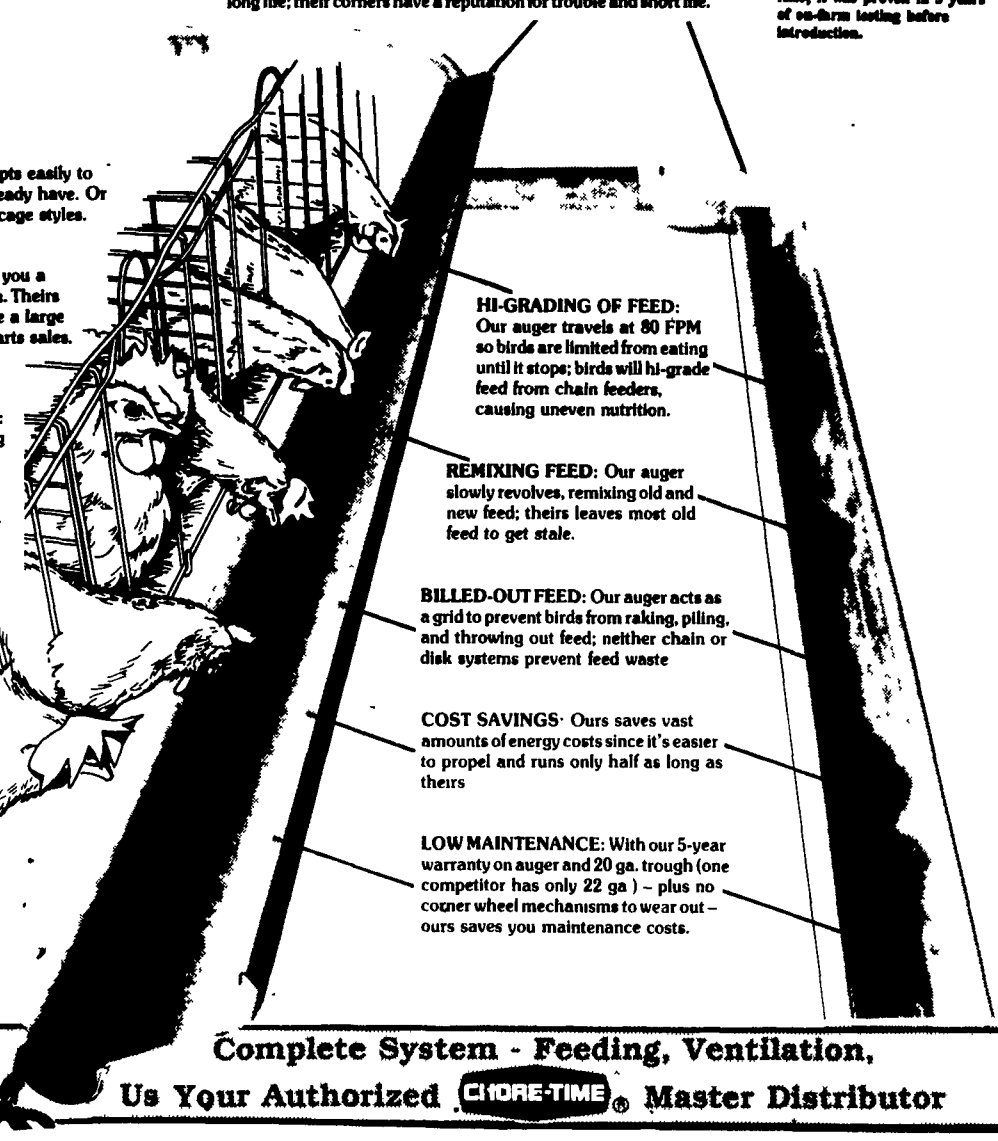
PROVEN DESIGN: Over 48 million birds are already on our feeder worldwide. Also, it was proven in 5 years of on-farm testing before introduction.

EASY ADAPTABILITY: Ours adapts easily to existing cage systems you may already have. Or choose from our wide selection of cage styles.

5-YEAR WARRANTY: Ours gives you a 5-year warranty on auger and trough. Theirs doesn't. In fact, their dealers derive a large percentage of their income from parts sales. Ours don't.

MICROPROCESSOR CONTROL: Our control lets you program feeding time to the second, to match the exact time of one circuit. Control number of feedings, time of each feeding – also 10-second "Stimulation Cycles" between feedings, to minimize separation, and improve your birds' feed intake

SIMPLE OPERATION: "Push-pull" Power Units with ⅓ or ½ HP motor are located in a cage, have hardened steel gears for trouble-free operation



HI-GRADING OF FEED: Our auger travels at 80 FPM so birds are limited from eating until it stops; birds will hi-grade feed from chain feeders, causing uneven nutrition.

REMIXING FEED: Our auger slowly revolves, remixing old and new feed; theirs leaves most old feed to get stale.

BILLED-OUT FEED: Our auger acts as a grid to prevent birds from raking, piling, and throwing out feed; neither chain or disk systems prevent feed waste

COST SAVINGS: Ours saves vast amounts of energy costs since it's easier to propel and runs only half as long as theirs

LOW MAINTENANCE: With our 5-year warranty on auger and 20 ga. trough (one competitor has only 22 ga) – plus no corner wheel mechanisms to wear out – ours saves you maintenance costs.

More Counties Eligible For Disaster Relief

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— Sixty-four counties in Pennsylvania are now eligible for disaster assistance as a result of action announced by U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Edward Madigan.

Seventeen additional counties were granted disaster designation on the basis of conditions within the county. The counties joining those previously declared are Allegheny, Beaver, Carbon, Elk, Indiana, Jefferson, Lackawanna, Lawrence, Mercer, Monroe, Northampton, Northumberland, Pike, Warren, Wayne, Westmoreland.

Counties contiguous to declared counties are also covered by the federal declaration. For the state, this means that Northampton, Monroe, and Pike are the three counties being extended coverage for the first time.

This leaves on Philadelphia, Delaware, and Montgomery counties not covered by relief provisions. These counties are in an area which has not suffered drought conditions similar to those in the rest of the state.

This action follows detailed analysis by USDA staffs at the county level which led to the recommendation by the federal agricultural state emergency board for disaster status for the affected counties.

Don Unangst, state executive director of ASCS and chair of the USDA agricultural state emergency board, said, "The action represents continued recognition that the severe summer weather continues to have a major, negative impact on Pennsylvania's agriculture despite recent rains."

Farmers - whether program participants or not - are encouraged to visit county USDA offices to consult on options available to them and to obtain advice of disposal of failed crops, late crop options, etc.

- ASCS will provide disaster program information, application data, and instructions and will indicate program options.
- FmHA can accept borrower applications.
- Penn State Cooperative Extension offices stand ready to provide detailed crop and feeding information.
- Soil Conservation Service will provide technical advice.

No direct cash assistance program has been established at this time as programs similar to 1988 or 1889 are not provided for under current legislation.

Effects Of Milk Pricing

fluid sales and drinking of milk by the consumer, the cheeses have improved so that the market has turned the other way, so we have about 60 percent Class II, and 40 percent of Class I. And that's what makes pricing a problem."

However, there are other apparent injustices in pricing milk on the farm.

"It's not only the price per hundredweight, it's the utilization that really makes the difference over what the farmer gets and he has no control over that.

"When it leaves his barn, it has to meet all requirements — no antibiotics, the temperature has to be right, the bacteria test has to be right, the butterfat, the protein — but he has no control of how the milk is utilized once it goes in the tank truck."

Furthermore, the dairyman has no idea how much money he is going to get for a tank-truck load of milk being driven down the farm lane, headed for a milk processing facility.

The dairyman has no idea how much money he made, if he broke even, or if he just lost money when the tank truck pulls away, Wilkinson said, "Until he gets a milk check six weeks later and he looks at the bottom."

Wilkinson said that in addition to having such a low and unstable dollar value of milk, the average person doesn't realize all the deductions that come off the check.

"A lot of people say, well I spent this much, 15 cents a hundred (pounds of milk) on advertising, I spent 55 cents on hauling, I spent 15 cents for cooperative dues, I spent 5 cents to help balance the budget in Washington.

"But the farmer only looks at the bottom number on his milk check at the dollars, because that's what he actually has to spend to pay his bills and to live.

"If he doesn't have enough (money) to go around, he generally takes it out of his family living. And I think by taking (money) away from children to see other folks maybe prospering, this is said.

Dutch Country Calf Sale

As an extra bonus to buying a competitive show calf, the association provides for a discount toward next year's sale to anyone whose Dutch Country calf is named a grand champion at a county fair, roundup, Farm Show, or the Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

"We feel we have some real good quality calves being bred on local farms that can be really competitive in the show ring. And instead of driving to Ohio, local people can come here and buy a reasonably priced calf, knowing it's healthy and not stressed."

Some people from out-of-state apparently agree as Miller noted that non-Pennsylvania buyers and consignors were involved for the first time. There were 10 consignors and 49 buyers registered.

The sale totaled $13,688 on 24 cattle, both steers and heifers, for an average price of $570, a new record. Harry Bachman, of Annville, was auctioneer.

New records were also made for the prices for the top heifer and steer. Last year the top steer and heifer brought $750 each. This year, the top heifer brought $875 and the stop steer sold for $790.

These prices were paid despite a weak economy, Miller said.

The top selling steer was a Maine Anjou/Angus cross consigned by Elmer Stehman, of Robesonia and bought by Jason Stoltzfus, of Elizabethtown. The April 4-born steer is a half brother to last year's grand champion at the Lebanon Area Fair.

The top selling heifer was purchased by Tammy Gelsinger, of Wernersville. It was consigned by Joe Messick, of Middletown. The open Simmental hiefer, MF Miss Doubletime A91, was born Feb. 18. The sire is the breed trait leader for weaing weight, yearling weight and maternal weaning weight.

In addition to the sale, the sponsors hold a show for the youth, who then sell their animals. Ron Miller, of Mertztown was judge.

The grand champion was a purebred Angus steer consigned by Larry Weaver, of Weaverland Valley Farms, and Kristin Chupp, of New Holland. Purchased for $760, by Brad Linton, of Kirkwood, it's sire was ROR Rolls Royce and the dam was a Yukon Jack daughter. Weaverland Valley Farms bred the last three state Farm Show reserve grand champion steers.

The reserve grand champion was a Simmental-Angus cross consigned by Messick Farms and Mylin Messick, of Middletown. It was purchased Fred Linton, of Kirkwood, for $690. Sired by Black Dynamo, it is eligible for the 1993 Farm Show Simmental Steer Show.

In addition to the sponsoring cattlemen's associations, more than 20 individuals and businesses provided support for the sale.

Berks Packing Co., of Reading, supplied lunch; Altmyer's provided show sticks; Creutzburg, show halters; Evergreen Tractor Co., provided use of a skid loader; John M. Herr's Sons provided rope halters; Huber's provided fly spray; K&K Feed, Inc., donated brooms; Lebanon Valley National Bank provided show supplies, mugs, and hats; Meridian Bank, a

WORK WATCH

The Work Watch Is Back!

In the mid-1980's we sold hundreds of work watches to hard-working individuals like yourself who needed an accurate, dependable timepiece. They needed a watch that would withstand the dust, moisture, bumps, and temperatures encountered on the farm, in the orchard, and in the woods. Many who bought the work watch told us it was the best watch they had ever owned. Now, due to the past success and the present need, we are again offering the work watch through Lancaster Farming.

Our work watch has all the features needed to endure the punishment you will put it through. The WATER RESISTANT seal will protect your watch when you irrigate fields, fix broken water systems, get milk splashed on your arm while feeding calves, or walk the fence in the rain, to find out where your cattle are getting out. Being SHOCK RESISTANT, your work watch will continue to work when it is slapped by a cow's tail, a falling board, or the belt shield that your arm slams against when your wrench slips off the bolt. While your watch is scraped by branches, rubbed against walls, and knocked against machinery, the low profile, SCRATCH RESISTANT, glass crystal will resist the scratches and cracks that render watches unreadable. Finally, the BATTERY POWERED QUARTZ movement of your work watch is accurate to within 2 minutes per year, and does not need to be wound, meaning that your watch will be on time, all the time, without any effort on your part.

A final proof of the strength of this watch and of its suitability to your needs is the warranty. If your work watch stops running within FIVE YEARS of the date of purchase, the manufacturer will repair or replace your watch at no charge This is one of the longest warranties in the watch industry. The manufacturer's confidence in this watch means that you can have confidence in its durability and can know that this is the only work watch you will need to buy for the next five years.

Co-op Meeting

profits were down. Agway Insurance Company paid nearly $2 million in claims for farm damage resulting from a series of catastropic storms during the spring months.

A new concept in ration balancing of dairy feeds was introduced to the nearly 3,000 farmer members at the meeting. Called Synchro-Max 2000, the feeding system is designed to maximize rumen microbe protein yield and milk production.

Rumen microbes are microorganisms in the dairy cow's digestive system that assist in milk production. For a few cents worth of input, studies at 13 successful dairy farms have shown that the computerized feed program has increased milk production more than three pounds per day, per cow, which translates to an increased new income for the farmer of 41 cents per cow per day.

Ralph Heffner, board chairman, reported that the farmer committees were being realigned to more nearly reflect the diversity of agriculture. He said that Agway's Advisory Committee system, which maintains member representation, is the heart of the cooperative's democratic structure, and any changes will be made very carefully.

Six farmers were elected to the 18-member Agway board of directors during the two-day meeting. They are Richard Call, Batavia, N.Y.; Vyron Chapman, Cassville, N.Y.; Eugene Freund, East Canaan, Conn.; Ralph Heffner, Pine Grove, Pa.; Frederick Hough, Augusta, N.J.; and Christian Wolff, Jr., Bloomsburg, Pa.

Milk Pricing

wrong," he said, and his face muscles tightened.

How this situation has come to be is easy to see, but not easy to change, Wilkinson said.

"If you look at the grocery basket, in a $100 basket of what we call food, only less than 50 percent of it is food items. The rest of it is paper items and drugs.

"So, actually, our food dollar is buying more than is ever did before, but we have been looking at it in a little different light."

According to a variety of officials and research, the profit margin on the price of milk has been increasing at the retail level while dropping significantly for the producer. A number of people have questioned why the farmer can't draw from that profit.

Wilkinson is one of them.

"There doesn't seem to be consumer resistance at the price that (retail milk) is now, so if we could give the farmer a more constant (income) level, he could pay his bills each month," Wilkinson said.

He said that except for extra costs, such as for varying costs — fertilizer in the spring, additional feed during drought or overly wet years, etc. — the farmer can know his costs of production and plan a long term business strategy.

"The costs (of production) are about the same each month, but he (the dairyman) can't understand when his milk check comes in that it's $4,000 or $5,000 less than it was the month before. He just doesn't have anywhere of making that up.

"If we could level that out, that yo-yo effect, the farmers would become accustomed to what they have to meet and they would either expand, withtract, or do things more efficiently, or do something. But now, they don't know what's going to happen the next month.

"You can't plan ahead with this kind of market situation. You can't plan to plant so many acres or whatever.

"The extension office used to say we need a three-year plan. Today we don't even have a three-month plan."

Wilkinson said the pricing system is inequitable, and while he doesn't condone dumping of milk, which has been proposed, he said he does understand why milk dumping has been proposed — not to hurt the consumer, but to get the consumer to pay attention.

"It's the small farmer who fees as if the world has turned cards on him, who feels as if . . . " Wilkinson broke off.

"It's like a rat in a corner, he'll fight back if you fight him, but if you didn't mind him, he'd go about his own way."

Business Is Blooming And Mums The Word

CHRIS McCAHREN
Juniata Co. Correspondent

PORT ROYAL (Juniata Co.)—To Megs Brummer of Port Royal, the family farm is a way of life, and when Megs talks about her lifestyle she says, "It's just kind of fun."

"Happy Breeze Farm" is what Megs along with her husband, Ed, and sons, Pete and Charlie, have called home since 1969 when they moved from Long Island. The move to Juniata County was prompted by the rising cost of land due to land development. Now the Brummers farm their land plus rented land totaling 130 acres.

They started as potato farmers in Long Island and have since diversified into raising numerous crops and livestock to alleviate being at the mercy of one market.

Today "Happy Breeze Farm" produces not only potatoes but also sheep, pigs, hay, small grains, and a variety of vegetables such as sweet corn, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage, rhubarb, spinach, asparagus, sweet potatoes, strawberries and raspberries. The vegetables are retailed at the farm and at the Golden Mile Farmers Market in Burnham for which Ed serves as the vice president for the association.

In the fall, "Happy Breeze Farm" turns into the "Mum Farm" with brilliant colors from 80 species of mums totaling 14,000 plants. Preparation for the mums begins during the first week of June when rooted cuttings are transplanted. Three times during the summer, the mums are hoed by hand, and by mid-August through October, the mums are hand dug for sale to individuals.

An important but fun part of their business is meeting all the different people.

Megs said, "Some people really get excited about selecting their own mums."

Many long hours of hard work go into the farm because the Brummers don't hire any outside labor. Megs stated that even when the boys were younger, they were included in the farm management decisions and had their individual chores. This family's work ethic is based on enjoying what they do and their faith in God, which is their source of strength and guidance through the good times and the bad times.

The family has fond memories of watching geese, picnics, and looking at the stars.

The younger son, Pete, graduated from Delaware Valley College with a degree in animal science and is now a partner in the farm. Pete also has a sheep shearing business in which he shears approximately 2,000 sheep a year. He's active with the Young Farmer's Association and serves as an Agway committeeman and helps with the local 4-H clubs and livestock judging team.

Charlie, the older son, received a bachelor's degree in agronomy from Penn State and a master's from the University of Georgia where he is currently working on his Ph.D. specializing in microgenetics in plant breeding.

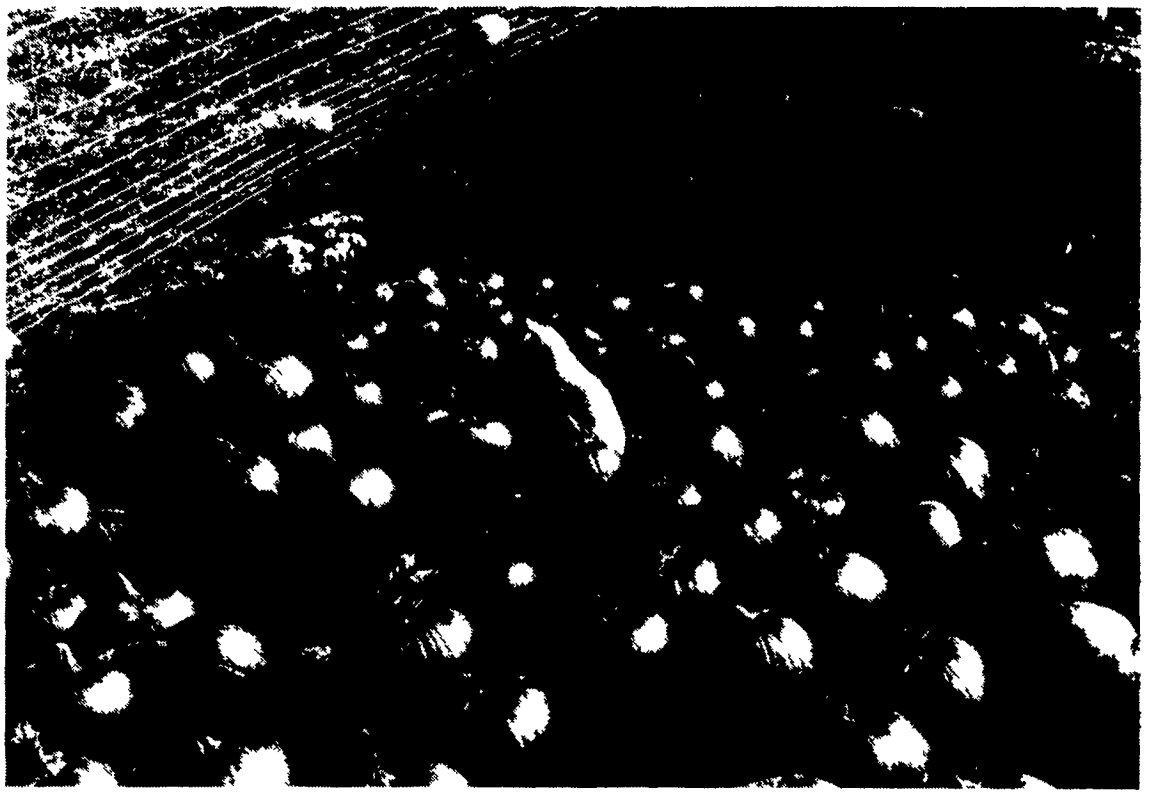
For the past 10 years the Brummers have hosted a Fresh-Air child from New York City. The Brummers want to provide an opportunity for a child who might not otherwise get the chance to be exposed to rural living.

Although Megs claims farming is her main profession, she wears a variety of hats. She is a former Home Economics teacher and served as an interim Juniata County home economist for 1½ years. Now she substitute teaches and does many handicrafts such as sewing, quilting, and knitting. Wool from their farm is used to make knitted vests and quilted sweater-jackets along with her unique creation of her "Happy Breeze Sheep" which are made from homespun wool. These crafts are also sold at the farm and some local shops and are noted for their quality workmanship. Megs teaches the Good News Club at Port Royal Presbyterian Church where the Brummers are active members.

When asked what changes may be in store for "Happy Breeze Farm" and the Brummer family, Megs was quick to reply that they would like to have more rain next year and eventually erect a building at the farm for their on-farm retail business. They plan to continue and improve upon their 220 ewe and 15 sow herds and finishing operation. Although the summer was dulled by the dry conditions, the mums pulled through this year's drought and definitely brightened the year.

At the present, business is blooming and "mums" the word!

The mum field has 14,000 plants covering 1½ acres.



A curious cat sits among the pumpkins grown at Happy Breeze Farm.

The Brummers display their potatoes grown, graded, and packaged at their Happy Breeze Farm. From left: Ed, Megs (wearing one of her hand-knit wool sweaters), and Pete.

Homespun wool gives these sheep a realistic touch.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

Jewel-like beauty scatters across the sod. Gold and garnet, topaz and ruby. Plenty more hover overhead - and regularly thud onto the soft grass carpeting beneath.

Golden Grimes and Cortland. Red Delicious and Golden Delicious. Stayman. And a few whose names we'll never know for sure. We crawl around the thick grass, gathering bucketfuls of the red and maroon and yellow and pale green apples.

These few rows of apple trees belong to neighbors who generously share from their abundance of apples in this year of plentiful fruit. A side-line mini-orchard, this fruit has seen minimal spraying for the myriad of problem that attack fruit.

The resulting sometimes misshapen, sometimes wormy fruit is therefore not picture-perfect and so deemed undesirable by many. But, small, crooked apples are just as juicy and tasty; and many of these are nearly perfect.

Their looks don't really matter. The bagfuls we gather and pile in the pickup are destined to be mashed, mooshed, squished, squashed, chopped and squeezed until the juice literally runs out of them.

The Farmer wants to make cider.

Wo do this only on occasion, usually years when these apples have piled up in volumes beyond what the grower can use. Then we ask permission to pick up the leftovers, gathering on hands and knees through a crisp, sunny fall afternoon. Crawling through the drops, watchful of the yellow-jackets feasting on rotting fruit, we soon sport sticky fingers, soggy jeans knees and exude the scent of aging apples.

Back home, the Farmer hoses dust from his prized, antique cider press, a treasure he acquired from a neighbor for a two-buck-investment when he was just 14. Good friends drive their lawn-tractor over the hill and we rig its belt-drive mechanism to power up the clattering machine.

Apples dumped into a wooden hopper atop the press are chopped fine by knives powered by the belt drive. The chopped apple bits drop down into one of two slat-sided baskets, one to be filling while the other is being pressed. The press itself is nothing more than a thick, round piece of ancient wood which is screw-turned down through the basket - by hand. As the wood compresses the chopped apple, foamy, brownish, heavenly-smelling juice runs out. Cider.

It becomes a collective effort, the tractor owners and the orchard owners also pitching in with the apple washing, chopping, squeezing. In the midst of the hectic two-hours of washing and pressing, at least one bucketful topples off the pickup and apples cascade down the blacktop grade past the milk-house. Everyone dashes to collect the rolling runaways on a juice-slick incline.

Our containers fill steadily and when the last basketful is squeezed, two 30-gallon plastic containers are nearly full. We fill jugs, pitchers, coolers and sweet, cold nectar-o' apple goes home with all those who helped.

Thick, rich, sweet, this is not just apple juice. This is the cider of our farm ancestry, cooled in the chill of the milkhouse, squeezin's laced with bits of grass and leaves, a little unwashed dirt, and undoubtedly at least a couple of worms for flavor.

It goes in freezers and in apple butter, canning jars and jelly, preserves of a sunny October weekend sweetened with shared laughter of friends.

Reminiscing, the Farmer recalls old timers tales of other ways to "preserve" cider, including burying "doctored" concoctions in full hay mows for later consumption. When the hay was fed down to the level where the cider barrel emerged, the finished beverage supposedly was ready.

"Wish I could find one of those recipes," he teases.

"Forget it," I tell him. "The hay mows are nearly empty."

And so, are the cider containers now, eagerly emptied by this collective group of cider lovers.

I keep wondering, though, if I need to keep my eyes open for hidden surprises when I throw bales down out of the hay mow.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

Penn's Agri-Women Influence Policy-Making

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — "A few years ago I didn't like the term activist," Carol Ann Gregg said, "but now I see that we need to be activists to straighten out things."

As president of Penn's Agri-Women, Gregg is convinced that women must influence government officials who wield policy-making decisions that affect agriculture.

"Washington hears much more from city people than from farmers," Greg told Agri-Women members who met in Harrisburg on October 24.

"Senator Goodling told me that he gets 20 letters a day from animal rightists," said Pat Sueck, who is vice president of the organization.

The information misconstrued by many non-farm groups concerns Agri-Women members. To counteract the deluge of anti-agricultural messages, the organization encourages farmers to write letters to senators and tell the truth to the media.

"Don't depend on farm organizations to write letters," Sueck said. "They (senators) want to hear from individuals, not paid organizations."

Penn's Agri-Women organized their first chapter in 1976 when they became affiliated with American Agri-Women. Their purpose is to unite together to promote agriculture for the benefit of the American people and the world.

The organization's objectives are to educate members on the important issues involving the agricultural industry, teach them how to communicate with the media and with the public, and to promote educational programs that advance the welfare of agriculture.

"We must get out and talk with the media and the public," Sueck said. "We must tell them, 'When you eat, think of the farmers you're trying to regulate and put out of business.'"

The organization encourages farmers to seek positions of power where they can influence policy-making that relates to agriculture. They quote Edmond Burke, British statesman of the American revolutionary period, who said, "The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil is that good men do nothing."

Pennsylvania Agri-Women affirm "that whatever happens, somebody plans it and the rest of us permit it. We are all responsible."

Agri-Women seek to forge the true image of the farm entrepreneur, foster collaboration with the system, formulate fair market practices, foster cooperation among producers, fight oppressive forces, and form leaders.

Agri-Women believe that if farmers were perceived as having power, they would not be ignored by lawmakers when policy is being formulated.

To encourage women to use every opportunity available to promote agriculture, Sueck reported on AAW leadership training and the Washington Fly-In, in which she participated.

She told of reading two environmental books that misrepresented agriculture by making statements such as "one million people die from pesticide poisoning each year." Sueck wrote letters of complaint to the publishing companies and to senators and others. She pleaded with members to utilize every open door to promote agriculture. "We can't do it alone," she said, "but together we can."

Members voiced concerns about the environmentalists groups that are influencing the schools and media with misconstrued information about agriculture.

Several members shared how they are handling misinformation in their communities and how to promote agriculture in a positive light.

In other businness, Penn's Agri-Women decided again to work with the state Department of Agriculture to provide the annual Ag Day Reception at the state capitol.

The organization considers the reception that serves a bountiful display of Pennsylvania food a tremendous influence to the state's lawmakers "who remember when you feed them."

Beth Heath Moore, executive director of the Pennsylvania Foundation for Better Living, told members what her organization is doing to educate adults and students on the importance of agriculture and how it affects their lives.

For the upcoming term, Pat Sueck was installed as vice president and Helen Musser as secretary for the Pennsylvania chapter of Agri-Women, which has 73 members.

Gregg said that Agri-Women push for a free enterprise system in contrast to Women Involved In Farm Economics (WIFE) who want government involvement and responsibility for farm programs.

Penn's Agri-Women meet one day a year at the Department of Agriculture in Harrisburg. The $10 membership fee covers dues and literature that is mailed to keep members abreast of changing politics.

In addition to the state meeting, members may attend the annual AAW convention. This year, the national convention will be held in Idaho on November 7 through 11.

To become a member of the PAW, mail $10 membership fee with name, address, and telephone number to Jackie McCarty, treasurer, 24 Gable Ave., Windsor, Pa. 17366 or call (717) 246-1693.

Hoppin' Good Recipes

The first day of hunting season always brings a flurry of requests for small game recipes. This year, Ann Haff from Ferndale, N.Y. sent us numerous rabbit recipes. However, her recipes are for domesticated rabbits, which the Happ family raises on their registered rabbitry farm.

The family raises show rabbits, which is very expensive. The meat rabbits help support the fancy rabbits.

"Domestic rabbit tastes almost like chicken," Ann said. The meat is firm, white, wholesome, appetizing, tender and fine flavored."

Rabbit meat is high in protein and low in fat. It has a low content of saturated fatty acids. It has a low cholesterol content and a low sodium content. It is a highly nutritious meat and is suitable for special diets for the aged, those needing low sodium diets or weight reduction.

Although Ann's recipes are for domesticated rabbits, they can be adapted to wild game. Remember to soak game in salt brine. The cooking time may need to be longer. Generally domesticated rabbits are used when they weigh about five pounds at 12 weeks of age. Ann encourages readers to try domesticated rabbit. She's certain they will be pleased with the taste and nutrition of rabbit meat. She said rabbit meat is ideal for those watching cholesterol or those who have digestive problems.

Fat, Cholesterol Content Of Wild Game

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With hunting season around the corner, weight-watching hunters may want to know how wild game compares to domesticated meat in terms of fat and cholesterol.

"Many people in rural areas consume a significant amount of wild game," says Dr. J. Lynne Brown, associate professor of food science in Penn State's College of Agriculture." But information on the fat and cholesterol content of deer, squirrel and other game often is lacking.

"Game meat tends to have the same amount of cholesterol as beef or pork, but considerably less fat than domestic meat," says Brown.

Nutrition experts agree it is important for all adults — but especially those with heart problems — to limit their fat and cholesterol intake.

The National Cholesterol Education Program recommends that healthy adults limit their daily cholesterol intake to less than 300 milligrams and their fat intake to no more than 30 percent of total calories consumed daily.

The following table shows how wild game stacks up in comparison to beef and pork. The beef sample used is a well-trimmed USDA standard grade. All samples are 100 grams (3.5 ounces) of raw meat. The skin was removed from the birds.

Meat	Fat (grams)	Cholesterol (milligrams)	Calories
Beef	2.7	69	158
Pork	4.9	71	165
White-tailed deer	1.4	113	153
Mule deer	1.6	85	151
Antelope	1.0	113	148
Buffalo	3.2	45	146
Squirrel	3.2	83	149
Cottontail rabbit	2.4	77	144
Chicken (domestic)	0.7	58	140
Turkey (domestic)	1.5	60	146
Turkey (wild)	1.1	58	158

Consumers Want Choices

NEW YORK, NY — With numerous responsibilities tugging them in different directions, American consumers want to simplify mealtime either by buying prepared foods or dining out.

The food should not only be convenient, it has to be healthy, too.

"Consumers are expecting restaurants and supermarkets to do the menu planning for them and to provide balanced, healthy meals," said Dee Coutelle of Noble & Associates, a firm specializing in food marketing, advertising and product development.

In an interview for Dairy Council Inc., she said, "They are tired of preparing the same old thing just because it's easy. They are looking for more balance and moderation in their diets."

Diversity Can Be Healthful: As a result, what Coutelle projects we will be seeing more of in the restaurants are ethnic, exotic, fun but healthy foods.

"I expect we will see more menu items with fresh cheeses and other dairy products, pasta, fish, turkey and game birds," said Coutelle. "And fusion cuisine - cooking that combines Mexican and Oriental foods, for example - will become more popular as we search for variety in the diet consumed outside the home."

As an example, Coutelle said that cheeses will show up more at the breakfast table. "Breakfast will expand its range and borrow from the lunch and dinner menus. Breakfast sandwiches of fruits and cheeses, stir fry "hash" of leftovers topped with cheese, and cheesy cornmeal grits are just some of the ways the foodservice industry is going to use dairy products to wake up breakfast," said Coutelle.

Other Thriving Markets: Other areas of growth that Coutelle projects are more emphasis on dairy products in special children's menus, including child-size appetizers, entrees and desserts; chocolate desserts (Coutelle says consumers will still indulge in their favorite desserts and justify them by choosing healthy, lower calorie entrees); and non-alcoholic drinks.

And when consumers choose to stop by the grocery store instead of the restaurant, they will still be looking for convenience and balance, especially in the dairy case. Brian Dowling, spokesperson for Safeway, Inc., says that his company is already responding to shifting consumer needs in its stores. "We definitely see a growing trend for the supermarkets to play a larger role in providing convenient, balanced, prepared foods," said Dowling. "In some cases, trained chefs are being hired to develop new products for the deli sections."

Many grocery chains are expanding their private label lines of whole dairy products with lower fat dairy products. Private label and name brand products in the refrigerated section, like fresh pastas and cream sauces, are addressing the growing demand for convenient, fast and nutritious food.

The Quicker The Better: In addition to higher demand for prepared foods, Dowling said that Safeway has noticed increased demand for frozen and microwaveable foods and for more and varied produce.

2 tablespoons light brown syrup
8 ¾ -inch thick slices of French bread

Combine butter, sugar, and syrup in saucepan. Heat until melted. Pour into 9x13-inch pan. Place bread on top of sugar mixture in one layer. Whisk eggs, milk, and cinnamon. Pour over bread. Top with blueberries, strawberries, or peaches.

U.S. food consumption studies show that nearly 40 percent of children snack between the end of the school day and dinner time, and nearly 50 percent snack again in the evening. Make sure dairy products are included in some of these snacks.

Indonesia: Where The Red Bird Of Paradise Flies

WARSAMDIN, Indonesia — A false dawn edges the ghostly outline of an island as four black inflatable boats glide across the glassy surface of an inland sea. The drivers, leaders of a U.S.-based tour, signal each other with flashlights.

One boat speeds up to a small dock while the others wait in the humid air, pungent with the decay of a nearby mangrove swamp. The destination: Warsamdin, a village on the small island of Waigeo.

Riding in the three other boats are 30 birding enthusiasts, binoculars at the ready. Their goal: to add to their life lists the red bird of paradise, a stunningly gorgeous, multicolored bird that lives on Waigeo.

A light flashes from the shore, giving the tourists permission to land. The birders pile out of their boats and follow their leaders up a narrow, muddy path that disappears steeply into jungle foliage.

They assume that the red bird of paradise hides from people who threaten its life and habitat. In this faraway village, the assumption is erroneous.

Indonesia, the world's fifth-most-populous nation, has 185 million people representing 300 different ethnic groups and speaking some 365 local dialects. They live on about 13,670 islands stretching across more than 5,000 kilometers of water.

Warsamdin is one of hundreds of tiny eastern Indonesian villages that remain nearly untouched by modern civilization. Their residents, unlike western Indonesians, see few white people.

Their ways are simple. "Although they survive at — sometimes below — subsistence level, their lives are in some ways far richer than ours," Lorne Blair tells National Geographic.

"They cannot afford any of the modern packaged and plastic goodies that have polluted the streams and shorelines of most other Indonesian villages," says Blair, a British filmmaker, author and explorer and a leader of the tour group.

Western clothes have replaced bark cloth for the Waigeo islanders, who live in thatched-roof huts built on stilts.

They have no electricity or sewage system, no telephones or telegraph, no regular mail service, no doctor, no store. Most importantly, they have no guns to kill the fat tropical pigeons, hornbills, screaming parrots, Australian sacred ibises and white cockatoos that fly overhead. And their village is still too remote for them to trap tropical birds for the illegal trade that has decimated species on other Indonesian islands.

One wide path runs between two rows of homes and peters out in the jungle. Women wash clothes in the stream. Men carve canoes out of tree trunks.

Waigeo men have no motors for their "prahus," the same type of small outrigger canoes that their Melanesian ancestors sailed across oceans for thousands of years.

They barter with traders who motor small boats to their dock every few weeks. They exchange salted fish, sago leaf, sea cucumber and pearl shells for clothes, plastic rope, batteries, knives and lamp oil.

The islanders hunt wild pigs and grow cassava and sweet potatoes in a sustainable slash-and-burn system that lets fields that have been used for three years lie fallow for 20.

Unlike the majority in Indonesia, the world's largest Moslem nation, the Waigeo people and those on several other islands are Protestants. Blended with their Protestantism is animism; in the cemetery, crosses on graves share space with reddish-purple plants meant to deter evil spirits.

Malaria is a problem, say the villagers. They have no quinine; the government is supposed to spray the mosquitoes once a year. A doctor, usually a government-educated physician who must work in these out-of-the-way villages for three years, makes an annual visit to augment the work of the midwives, who double as village trance-healers.

While the birders scramble through the jungle in pursuit of their elusive quest, the ship's doctor offers villagers a free clinic. The ship's staff presents a case of cold soft drinks — a special treat on a hot equatorial island with no refrigeration — and gifts from the passengers, such as pens and paper. Blair gives clove cigarettes to the island men who gather silently around him.

Suddenly a male red bird of paradise flies over the village. The islanders ignore it, despite its eye-arresting mix of green, yellow, brown and crimson feathers.

Running hard behind its flight path is one of the three birding leaders. "Have you seen my group?" he shouts. "The red bird of paradise is flying right over us!"

Too late. The bird that mingled comfortably with the residents of Warsamdin flies away just as the birders emerge from the jungle — muddy, exhausted and unable to write an invaluable new entry in their life books.

Two rhinoceros hornbills perch in a tree on an Indonesian island. The birds are among the many exotic birds that share the jungles of Indonesia. On Waigeo Island, in the eastern part of the Southeast Asian nation, birds are more secure than they are on some other islands, partly because villagers have no guns.

Outrigger canoes are the favored means of transportation on many of Indonesia's 13,670 islands. On Waigeo Island, men carve their canoes or "prahus," out of tree trunks and propel them with paddles, much as their Melanesian ancestors did. The people of Waigeo have few conveniences such as electricty.

Pet Sheep, Buy Wool At Yarn Shop On The Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

STEVENS (Lancaster Co.) — Yarn Shop on the Farm is tucked between Reamstown and Terre Hill along Red Run Road in northeastern Lancaster County.

One one side of the road, sheep graze on the meadow grass. On the other side, the house with an enclosed front porch holds a stash of fine wool yarn, spinning fleece, blankets, sheepskins, and knitting accessories.

Yarn Shop on the Farm evolved almost by error when Loren Sadler bought 17 sheep for his wife Joanna in 1959.

"We knew nothing about sheep," Joanna confessed recently, "and we didn't bother to read up on them."

But when the Sadlers lost some lambs including two sets of triplets, they decided they had better find out how to raise sheep.

They sent for information from the Penn State Agriculture Extension and from other universities that taught sheep raising. They also subscribed to Shepherds Magazine.

They soon learned a lot about preventing the myriad of sheep problems. Although the Sadlers started out by raising Dorsets, after trying a variety of breeds, they have settled for mostly Corriedales and Columbias, for the fine yarn luster and the nature of the sheep.

"In those days, wool prices were low just as they are today. So I decided we could do better financially if I did something with the wool."

Joanna sent the wool to a Maine mill that washed and spun it into skeins and returned yarn to the farm. Joanna liked playing with color and reviving her knitting skills that she had learned as a child. She taught others to knit and sold some of the natural and color-dyed yarn.

About six years ago, the Sadlers enclosed their front porch so they could tuck a yarn shop inside their home.

Intrigued with color, Joanna enjoys experimenting with dyeing the wool by using powdered Kool Aid and plants such as goldenrod, black walnut, tunflowers, hardwoods, milkweed, indigo, and even such items as copper pennies and copper wiring.

Customers will find natural-colored yarn, rich solid colors, tweeds, and heathers. What they won't find are man-made yarns.

"Experienced knitters know wool is the only yarn worth the time and effort involved in knitting your own project," Joanna said.

Wool sheds soil, retains its beauty and does not split, fray, or pill like man-made yarns. Wool is durable, absorbent, and wrinkle resistant. It breathes, insulates, drapes well, and resists flame.

The Kool Aid dyes give variations of colors. Grape seems to be one of the most popular as it gives variations of blue, mauve, green, and off white.

For those who are interested in dyeing natural yarn with Kool Aid. Joanna offers these directions.

Tie a skein with four figure eight ties so yarn doesn't tangle during the process. Wash in ivory soap and rinse carefully, keeping rinse water the same temperature as the wash water. Joanna uses hot water from the spigot. She said wool won't mat or felt in hot water as long as it is not agitated or put in water with a temperature change. Rinse the yarn. Let it soak 15 minutes in enough water to cover with one tablespoon vinegar. Squeeze water out of yarn and rool in towel briefly. Lay on plastic. Sprinkle one package Kool Aid powder over the yarn. Put yarn into 1 gallon glass jar with warm water and put in canner kettle to cook for 30 minutes or put in a large pyrex casserole with water and bake in 350 degree oven for 45 minutes.

Pour water off the yarn. Wash in soapy water and rinse again. Color does not wash out.

In addition to wool, the Yarn Shop carries cotton yarns, knitting and crochet patterns, knitting needles, and buttons.

Although Joanna loves to promote her own wool, she has another interest called Peace Fleece, a Soviet American yarn. This yarn is blended with Soviet and American wool.

The idea of a Peace Fleece came to a Maine sheep farmer in 1985. He was concerned about the conflict between the Soviet Union and the U.S. and the threat of nuclear war. Convinced that the Russian people were just like Americans, who love their families and did not want a nuclear war, he believed that relationships between the two countries could be improved through the Peace Fleece if American and Soviet craftspersons learned to correspond, share ideas, and become friends.

By blending American and Soviet wool and offering it in kits to make mittens, hats, pullovers, vests and cardigans, the Peace Fleece project was marketed to craftspersons here and abroad.

Some believe that the Peace Fleece has had a small impact on the changes that have developed between the two countries. Now Peace Fleeces are being made with other contries experiencing conflict with the U.S.

These kits are available for sale in Joanna's shop.

The Sadlers also custom butcher lambs and sell breeding sheep on their 16-acre farm. In addition to raising sheep, they grow fruit, nut and Christmas trees and are beekeepers. Last week, Joanna won first prize for cookies made with honey at the Lancaster County Honey Producers meeting. The hermit cookie recipe is from her grandmother, who lived in St. Paul, Mn., and is dated 1899.

Joanna is on the board of directors for the Lancaster County Sheep and Wool Growers. For a brochure listing Lancaster County sheep and wool growers and those who sell sheep products, contact Chester Hughes, Penn State Extension Office, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster, PA 17601 or call (717) 394-6851.

Yarn Shop on the Farm is open Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., and other times by chance or appointment. Write or call the shop located at 1235 Red Run Road, Stevens, PA 17578, (717) 267-5860.

MICROWAVE PACKAGING MATERIALS MAY HARM FOOD

Some microwave packaging material may release potentially harmful substances into your foods.

Within the last year, problems have been identified with the special browning devices and clingwraps used in microwave cooking, according to leading food scientists.

Plastic wrap has been found to cause problems in microwaves. If the temperature gets too high, the plastic can melt into the food.

Food scientists recommend that consumers use inert materials such as glass and ceramic to cover microwaved foods. If you use plastic wrap, try to avoid food contact.

Only those wraps, paper towels and containers labeled microwave safe should be used for cooking.

Preliminary studies conducted by the Food and Drug Administration indicate that some packages containing browning and crisping elements may allow trace amounts of chemicals to seep into microwaved food.

These browning elements — also known as heat susceptors — are found in microwave popcorn bags, cardboard pizza crisping platforms and in packages of microwave French fries, fish sticks and Belgian waffles.

When the package is submitted to high temperatures, two things can happen. Chemicals in the inks, paper, plastics and dyes break down and form new compounds which may be absorbed by the food.

Other components of the packages, such as adhesives and residues from the paper, also may form new compounds and move directly into the food, contaminating it.

To avoid chemical contamination, consumers should not exceed the microwaving times recommended on the package instructions. They should use only the recommended temperature and power levels to prepare the food.

If the packaging becomes extremely brown or charred, food scientists recommend that you do not consume the product.

FDA originally approved use of the components of heat susceptors based on usage at conventional oven temperatures below 300 degrees Fahrenheit. The agency now has discovered that heat susceptors are causing some food products to reach 500 degrees F. when used in microwave ovens.

PREPARING APPLIANCES FOR WINTER

If you have a summer home, a few precautions are necessary to keep refrigerators, washing machines, and dishwashers from winter damage.

Thoroughly clean all appliances and drain washing machines and dishwashers. Then, disconnect the appliance from the electrical supply and leave the lid or door open to allow air to circulate inside.

For washing machines, first clean and freshen by adding a cup of lemon-scented bleach, then run the empty washer through a full cycle. Remove any lint from the lint filter. Turn the water faucets off and disconnect the inlet hoses. Advance the cycle to the final spin of the Regular cycle and run the machine, draining any water that may be in the drain hose.

Follow a similar procedure for the dishwasher, using a fresh- or lemon-scented automatic dishwashing detergent. To remove food deposits, carefully clean the door gasket with a baking soda and water solution. Drain the dishwasher according to manufacturer's instructions.

A recent Gallup poll of parents and children shows milk is the most common lunch beverage. Milk is also the top pick by parents and kids to include in a healthy lunch.

Cook's Question

ANSWER — C.L. Wilson of Silver Spring, Md., wanted a recipe for whole wheat bread that had appeared on the Pillsbury Flour Bag about 25 to 30 years ago. Here is one from Lois Welker of Elkton, Md., who said the recipe was a junior winner (Nancy Tate, Fl.)in the Pillsbury recipe and baking contest. Lois first used this recipe in 1959 and since then it has been a family favorite.

Honey-Wheat Bread

Soften:
- 1 packet active dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water

Combine in large mixing bowl:
- ½ cup honey
- 1 tablespoon salt
- 2 tablespoons shortening melted in
- 1 cup scalded milk

Cool to lukewarm. Gradually add to softened yeast to form a stiff dough:
- 3 cups whole wheat flour
- 3 cups all-purpose flour

Knead on floured surface until smooth and satiny, 8 to 10 minutes. Place in greased bowl and cover.

Let rise in warm place until double in size, about 2 hours.

Shape into two loaves. Place in well-greased loaf pans, cover.

Let rise in warm place until dough rises above pan edges, about 2 to 2½ hours.

Bake at 350 degrees for 50 to 60 minutes. Cool and glaze, if desired.

Honey Glaze:
- Combine 1 cup sifted powdered sugar
- ¼ cup chopped pecans
- 1 tablespoon honey

Blend in 2 to 3 tablespoons milk until spreading consistency.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Because we are moving to our newly built log house, I've started to dig through some closets and cupboards. I'm glad when I find toys, books, and dishes that have a child's name on the item. Then I can assign it to a particular person instead of packing it in a box.

Our three girls were all in 4-H sewing clubs over a period of some 20 years. So they accumulated boxes containing scraps of material of all kinds. There is everything from velveteen to satin and lots of cotton and polyester. The children suggested that I burn them but that was too hard to do. After a few phone calls I found a retirement home where they can use the material to make quilts and comforters. That makes me feel better about getting rid of them.

When I'm not wrapping dishes, I pick up black walnuts. There are many trees on our farm and I do hate to see them go to waste. If I could find someone willing to pick up some of them, I would be very glad to give them. I does take some work to hull and crack them but often older people enjoy this activity as a winter pastime.

Somehow, I still can't believe that I must take all the pictures off of the walls and the curtains down from the windows and move to another house. Allen has worked with the builders for many months and has spent hours and hours in the new house. Therefore, I feel maybe he will adjust better to his new surroundings, with the highway noise, then I who have stayed here and kept the home fires burning — meaning that I tended the garden, made the meals, washed the clothes, and many other everyday duties.

Parenting Tip On Family History

FLEMINGTON, NJ — Older family members are a valuable resource to school-aged children. They can give children a sense of continuity and security in the face of so many changes in the world around them.

Thanksgiving is a time when many families get together to share a meal. This year, share more than a meal. Give a child and an older family member the chance to share memories.

First, help your children decide who might be most willing to talk with them about personal or family history. Pick one topic to start, such as, "the kinds of work you have done," or "what your parents were like." Then have your children develop specific questions like, "what did your mother look like," "what is your favorite memory of her," "how are you alike/different," and so on. Write each question on a separate index card or piece of paper. Then there will be room for writing the answers.

At interview time, ask the children to choose a quiet place. Be sure to note the date, who is being interviewed, and who is doing the interviewing. Have the children ask their questions one by one, writing the answer after each question.

After the interview, your children can rewrite the interview (the sooner the better). A copy could then be included with a thank-you note to the family member interviewed.

Copies for other family members could make an extra special holiday gift. Perhaps this can be the start of a larger project -- collecting a family history!

Corinne Nissley Heads Lancaster County's Society Of Farm Women

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Today is the day that Corinne Nissley takes over leadership for the county's 801 members of the Society of Farm Women. The organization is holding its 74th convention at the Farm and Home Center, Lancaster, where Corinne will be installed by former president Judy Greenleaf.

Corinne is the epitome of the organization that was founded in 1919.

"Farm Women hold the basic belief that a home should be nurtured with a father, a mother, good food, spiritual teaching, and the kind of values that America was built upon," Corinne explained. "I know that sounds, white, Anglo Saxon, and protestant, but I'm not embarrassed by it. I believe this is what we (the Society of Farm Women) have contributed to our country. Other groups have contributed other things and together that is what makes our country strong."

Since 1946, Corinne has been a member of Society 19, one of 31 societies that meet in the county. Corinne has held numerous offices within the organization. In fact, this is her second stint as president of the county organization. To become president, the candidate must first serve a two-year term as second vice president and another two-year term as first vice president before receiving the president's gravel for a two-year term.

"The organization was basically founded as a support group for farm wives," Corinne said. "It was a social outlet as well as a time to learn and help with community needs."

Although the organization continues to stress the importance of making home and community a better place to live, the majority of Farm Women members no longer live on the farm. Corinne herself moved off the farm when she and husband sold the family farm for development.

"Although many members no longer live on the farm, we share the interest in preserving agriculture and the values that accompany it," Corinne said. "The values that Farm Women teach are not only for farm wives but for all women.

The Society's motto is "For Happiness." And that motto is the motivating force behind Corrine. She hopes to instill the motto even more deeply within the lives of members during her term as president.

"If we give happiness to our families, neighbors, and friends, we will be happy as well," she said.

In order to bring happiness to others, Farm Women support community civic projects. During the Society's annual meeting held today, it will donate $4,000 to the Make-A-Wish foundation.

"That's no small gift," Corinne emphasized. In addition to that, each individual society annually chooses three charities to which they contribute.

Corinne said that the Society of Farm Women is a "graying" organization. "As our members get older, membership is dwindling. I'd liked to see Farm Women grow, but I'm stymied," Corinne said.

Since the majority of younger women have careers, time is a premium. Unlike the years when the Farm Women organization was first established, women today have numerous clubs, support groups, church and community activities in which they can participate.

The founders of the organization remain a cohesive group. "We get a lot of motivation and satisfaction from the the things we learn from each other.

Corinne grew up during the depression era. By trade, Corinne's father was a butcher.

"We did not have a lot of things, but we had a lot of love," Corinne said of her family of 10 siblings. Her father loved music and Corinne recalls that he often held her on his lap and taught her how to beat time and read music. The family often sang together. Corinne and her sisters learned to play piano and organ. As she grew older, Corinne's love of music has never wavered. For many years, she has been director of the choir for Hempfield Church of the Brethren, East Petersburg.

When Corinne married Scott Nissley in 1942, they settled on the family farm in Landisville where they raised five children. "Our children were the eighth generation to be raised on the Nissley farm," Corinne said.

The Nissleys had a grain and beef farm. "I planted enough tobacco to cover half of Lancaster County," Corinne quipped.

Because she loved to entertain, the Nissley family has been home for many high school and college exchange students. In fact, in 1987 and 1988, the family hosted the second generation of exchange students when they provided a home for the daughters of their first exchange student.

In the 1970s, the Nissleys built a home in the meadow and sold the remaining acres now known as Scotland Estates.

In 1965, Corinne began working in retailing at Sears and later Gimbles and Watt and Shand. In 1987, she retired from the personnel department of Watt and Shand. Because she loves to be busy, Corinne now works three days a week at Lenox China Shop at Rockvale Square.

"I never have a day that I don't know what to do," Corinne said. In addition to her busy schedule of entertaining guests, Farm Women activities, and golfing, Corinne cares for her 82-year-old sister three or four days a week.

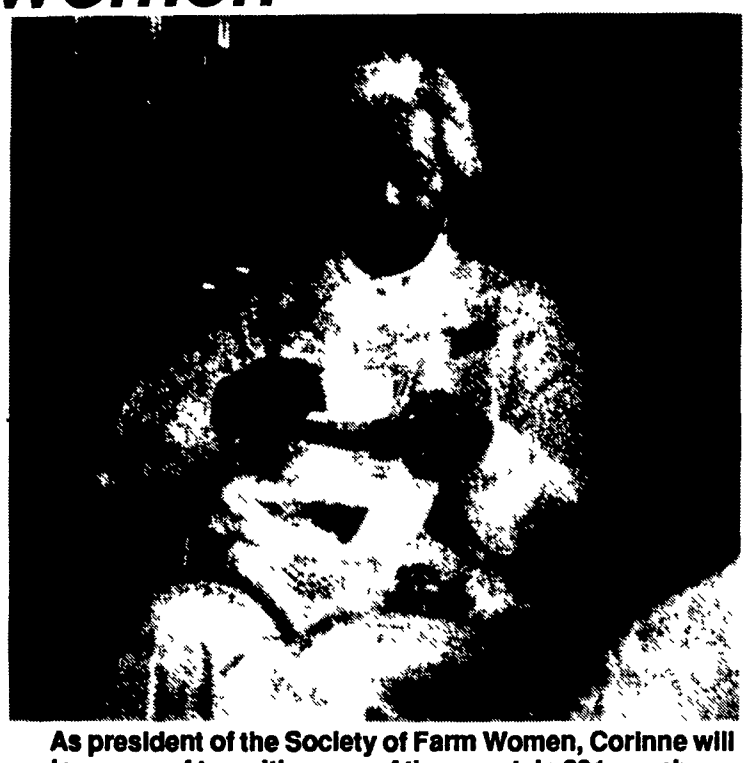
Corinne and her husband Scott celebrated 49 years of marriage this year. They have five children and seven grandchildren. The Nissley children live in urban areas in other states. "But I think growing up on a farm continues to influence them. They all love to putter in the dirt and have a place where they can garden or raise flowers," Corinne said.

Recently, when Corinne warned her lawyer son that he'd kill himself by working so hard, he retorted, "Where did I get my work ethnic?"

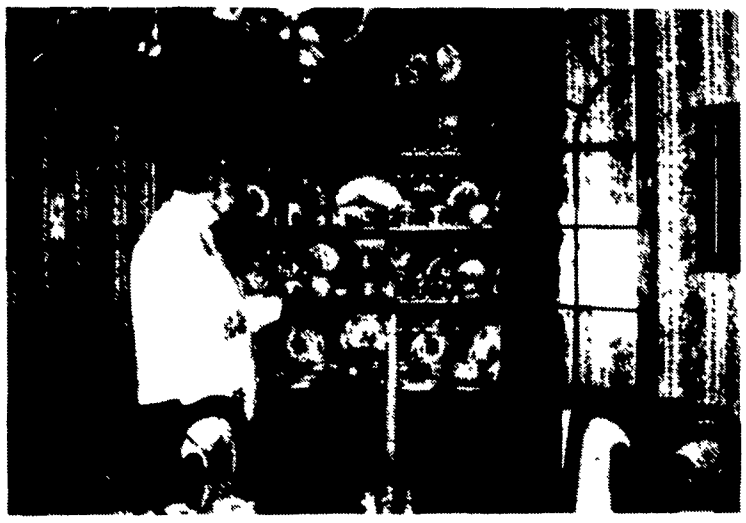
Corinne laughed as she recalled the incident. "I'm not ready to sit in a chair and read all day or spend my whole day in the kitchen. I like working and always have."

In all she and other Farm Women members do, they do "for happiness." She hopes that others will enjoy beautifying their surroundings to make the world a better place to live.

Those who are interested in Farm Women membership, which costs $4 annually, should contact Corinne at (717) 898-8612.



As president of the Society of Farm Women, Corinne will enjoy a cup of tea with many of the county's 801 members. Both Corinne and the Society of Farm Women teach the art of beautifying the home and community.



As an avid collector of fine antiques and one who loves to entertain, Corinne insisted on moving this corner cupboard from the farmhouse into the new home they built in their meadow. The corner cupboard holds many antique dishes that Corinne collects.

Corinne Nissley is the new president for the Lancaster County Society of Farm Women. This is the second term for Nissley who has been a member of the group since 1946.

Program To Educate Doctors On Heart-Care Diet

CHICAGO, IL — As a major source of nutrition information to consumers, physicians realize the important role diet plays in good health. Too often, though, physicians have had little training in nutrition, and need additional education to allow them to recommend the best food choices.

A new continuing education program funded by the meat industry through its checkoff programs is helping provide physicians with that education. The program, called "Practical Strategies for the Dietary Management of Hypercholesterolemia," provides doctors with research-based information on high blood cholesterol, as well as techniques to use in counseling patients with this condition about diet.

The dietary role of meat, one of the American consumer's most popular foods, is highlighted in the evening program through a slide presentation, printed handouts, and a nutritious dinner. The program is approved for continuing education credits by the American Medical Association through the George Washington University School of Medicine. It has also been favorably reviewed by the American Academy of Family Physicians, and is approved for one hour of continuing education credits through that organization.

The program was based on a physician's roundtable discussion conducted last March in Chicago. A complete summary of those discussions is provided to participating physicians, who may also order additional printed Meat Board informational materials for their patients, or receive a set of slides used in the program for presentations they give to colleagues or others in the healthcare community.

Seven programs have been presented to doctors since the education effort was established last August.

"Working with organized medicine is one of the best ways to generate a credible, long-lasting message," said Curtis. "In addition, by using well-established research, the industry increases its credibility with the physicians themselves.

CORRECTION

In the article about Australian cattle dogs that appeared in the October 12 issue, the Gaines Regional Obedience Show was incorrectly referred to as herding instead of obedience. Also, a pup belonging to Cheryl that was credited as coming from one Derry's females actually came from a different breeder.

Fall Is A Good Time To Build A Compost Pile

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — When the dog days of summer yield to the cooler days of autumn, homeowners may want to build a compost pile to recycle leaves, garden plants, kitchen scraps and grass clippings. And the composting process can continue through the coldest days of winter, says an expert in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

"Nearly 30 percent of the waste homeowners throw away each year can be composted," says Dr. J. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture." "Composting turns wastes into a valuable soil conditioner to use in gardens, around trees and on lawns."

Composting is an inexpensive, natural process that decomposes organic matter into a dark, crumbly material similar to humus. Finished compost helps soil retain water by increasing its organic content. It also provides some nutrients.

To build a compost pile, start by deciding which type of compost bin to use. "Composting doesn't require a structure or bin, but uncontained heaps can be visually offensive to neighbors," Nuss says.

Ready-made compost bins are available at hardware or lawn and garden stores or from gardening catalogs. An inexpensive bin can be made from masonry blocks, boards, wire or snow fence. The bin should be at least three feet high and three feet wide.

Place the bin on level ground and fill it with organic household or yard waste, such as plant matter, vegetable scraps, egg shells, coffee grounds, sawdust -- even small amounts of newspaper.

The pile should contain a mix of carbon-rich and nitrogen-rich materials because both are essential for the microorganisms that do the decomposing. "Green, leafy wastes generally are high in nitrogen, while woody materials tend to be high in carbon," Nuss says. "Fertilizer and manure also are good sources of nitrogen."

The composting microorganisms require water, so the pile should be kept moist. One way to gauge moisture is the squeeze test. "Tightly squeeze a handful of material from the pile," Nuss says. "If more than one or two drops of water come out, the pile is too moist. If the pile feels drier than a wrung-out sponge, it's too dry."

Decomposition without oxygen can cause bad odors, so turn the pile weekly with a pitchwork to aerate it. Using a fair amount of coarse material -- dry leaves or bulky plants, for instance -- also helps ensure that the pile gets proper aeration.

With proper aeration and ample amounts of carbon, nitrogen and moisture, the pile should reach at least 90 degrees Fahrenheit in the middle. Temperatures up to 140 F will kill weed seeds in the compost, but higher temperatures can kill the composting microbes. A soil thermometer can be used to check the soil temperature. If the temperature gets too high, turn the compost pile.

"As long as the pile is large enough to insulate itself, it will continue to decompose throughout the winter without being turned," Nuss says. "When warm weather returns in the spring, begin turning it again." The compost is ready to use when the pile cools and the material is dark, crumbly and sweet-smelling, like soil.

Complete information about starting a home compost pile is available in "Composting to reduce the Waste Stream: A Guide to Small Scale Food and Yard Waste Composting," a 48-page publication featuring easy-to-read charts and guidelines.

Copies of the guide are available for $4.00 from the Publications Distribution Center, College of Agriculture, 112 Agricultural Administration Building, University Park, PA 16802; (814) 865-6713.

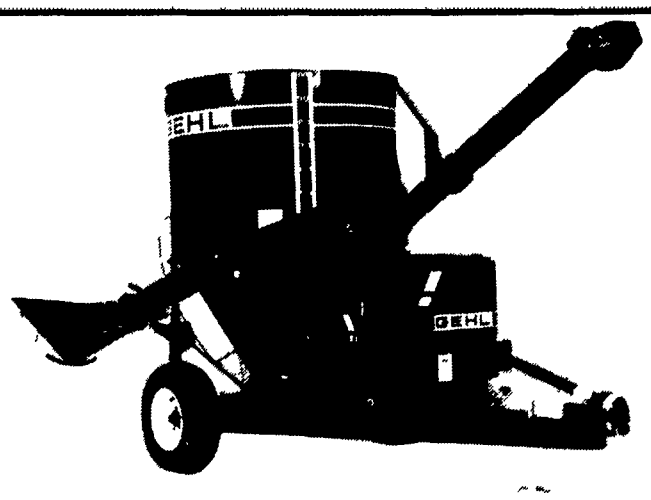
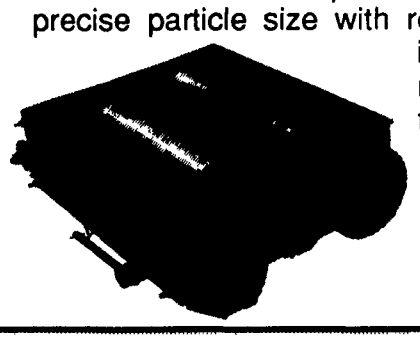
GEHL®

Roller Mixer
The Industry Leader

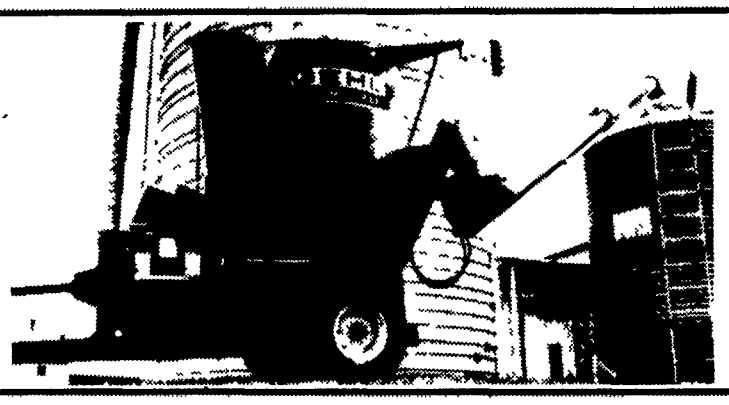
We've combined the proven features and advantages of our Mix-All with a commercial grade roller mill to give you the best portable roller mill feed maker available today.

A Gehl roller mill produces a coarse feed of precise particle size with reduced dust and "flour" in the feed. That means optimum gain for your livestock.





A heavy-duty, commercial grade roller mill features deep grooved rolls that uniformly reduce grain to a pre-determined particle size for maximum nutritional value.



Gehl Mix-All®: the "can do" machine!

On-farm feedmaking has never been better. Or more worry-free. In fact, Gehl Mix-All® portable grinder-mixers are truly "can do" machines Because they fit into any feedmaking operation; uniformly grind and mix ingredients for a higher quality feed; and save work and time with efficient hydraulics. Choice of 100 or 135 bu. capacity models.

Come in today and see what a Mix-All® "can do" for you!

Gehl TMR Mixer Feeders Are #1

Nothing can maximize the return on investment in your dairy or beef feeding operation like a Total Mixed Ration (TMR) feeding system. And nothing makes TMR work better than a Gehl mixer feeder. Here's why:

- Better Mixing Action - Unique four-auger design creates a double figure-8 mixing pattern for fast and complete mixing of all feed ingredients.
- Energy Efficient - Planetary drive system requires less horsepower.
- Built To Last - Patented star couplers absorb shock loads by allowing the bottom augers to flex, providing long service life.
- Six Sizes - From 150 to 500 cubic feet mixing capacities.
- Three Styles - Trailer type, stationary and truck-mounted units to fit your operation.

Cumberland Co. Honors 4-H'ers At Banquet

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — The 4-H annual achievement and recognition banquet took place at Penn Township Firehall, where many youth and adults were recognized in a variety of ways by extension staff and the 176 persons in attendance.

The 1991 County outstanding 4-H boy, Jèremy Stets and outstanding girl, Diane Myers, in addition to Derek Heine, outstanding junior 4-H member, were presented trophies from Mitch Gelbaugh, president of Carlisle Kiwanis, the sponsor of these awards.

Mark Yarish, representing Ralston Purina (Knisley's Agriculture Center) and American Youth Foundation proudly presented Amy Jones and Michael Cornman with "I Dare You" booklets written by Danforth, an award considered outstanding for any individual to receive. Three persons were selected fof their accomplishments as an officer of their club, Emily Fisher, outstanding treasurer; Amy Jones, outstanding secretary; and Michelle Cornman, outstanding news reporter. York Farm Credit provided awards for these, along with the outstanding "New Carlisle Fair" 4-H exhibit to the Newville Chefs Club.

Adults were recognized as well for their faithfulness and support to 4-H. She has been pianist for 4-H fashion shows for many years. Almyra Heine, Newville, was presented the Gladys Holtry Memorial Award for outstanding leader of the year. IS YOUR CHILD'S CARE OF RABBITS ADEQUATE?

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science

Human care for rabbits in captivity is valuable and essential to the animal's health and welfare. Captivity allows people to be the sole and entire regulator of living conditions of any animal.

Most rabbits in captivity are in a small wire floored pen so the animal can't pasture, race around, hunt various types of food, nor can the rabbit exercise extensively, nest naturally, drink from a stream, or mate naturally in a wild environment.

Husbandry people soon discover we, the human, the herdsman, the owner, the shepherd, have an awesome responsibility to provide every need for an animal in captivity.

So, then, how can we prevent careless damage to rabbits in captivity? To prevent rabbits in captivity from being mistreated, follow these steps:

- Walk to and observe the rabbit 2 or 3 times daily.
- Look for the availability of fresh feed, water, and air.
- Examine the rabbits' feet and legs every week.
- If the rabbit feels too heavy or too fat, reduce calories in the ration fed. Provide a complete whole pelleted feed fresh daily.
- Keep water available to the animal — fresh, clean, cool, and unpolluted.
- Clean manure out from under the pen daily or weekly — never let manure accumulate for a month or more. Spread manure at less than 1 ton dry matter/acre on soil.
- Provide adult rabbits with 50 (+/-) square inches of floor space per pound of trim rabbit and give young rabbits (below 16 weeks of age) 100 (+/-) square inches of floor space per pound of trim rabbit. (This is a sliding scale indicator of adequate space — it may have to be modified for large litters).
- Never give a rabbit bright or intense light for 24 hours a day. Rabbits should be in darkness for 8-12 hours a day. Give rabbits 12-16 hours a day of modest light from incandescent or non-pulsating fluorescent lights. One-half to one footcandle intensity at the feeder is enough.
- A salt block, high quality legume hay, and a toy or tin can with a marble in it to play with may be of extra value to the rabbit to pass the time away in captivity.
- Children can help domestic rabbits along by playing with the rabbit several hours a day. If a child gets a rabbit out of its cage and sits it in green clover for one hour a day, the rabbit behaves better. If the child pets the rabbit, brushes or bathes the rabbit, or plays tag with the rabbit, then we find, in most cases, the rabbit remains healthier and behaves better in captivity.

Meyers, Lebo Exit 4-H With Banners

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.)— Darren Meyers and Nicole Lebo, Greencastle, have shared the grand champion and reserve grand champion honors five of the last six years at the Franklin County 4-H Beef Roundup, and they did so again on Saturday, October 12, the last 4-H show for both.

Darren, 19, showed his 1,240 pound Ang-Chi crossbred steer, Baldy, to mediumweight champion. He was then selected grand champion under the watchful eye of Judge William Holloway of York County. Judge Holloway praised the champion steer for its thick top, long, deep quarter, square rump, and smooth finish. He said this steer could be competitive in any show. Baldy sold that night for $4.10 per pound to Madiera Chiropractic Office and Michael Starr Insurance, both of Chambersburg.

Nicole Lebo, 19, showed her reserve grand 1,210-pound Ang-Chi-Hereford crossbred steer. Hoss's Steak and Sea House purchased the reserve for a club record of $2.80 per pound. Nicole, president of the club, was also named champion fitter and showperson. Judge Holloway praised Nicole for her fitting and showing techniques. Nicole has been the champion fitter four of the past five years at the annual show.

Trina Eshleman, also showing in her last show, won the medium heavyweight class with a 1,300-pound home bred steer. Trina is club secretary.

Lorinda Hawbaker, club treasurer, won the heavyweight class with a 1,485-pound crossbred. David Sheiss paraded his 1,265-pound homebred steer to win the light heavyweight class. The biggest smile of the day came when Benjamin Schellhase, 8, showing at his first roundup, won the lightweight class with a 1,195-pound steer.

Judge Holloway praised the 4-H'ers for their hospitality, sportsmanship toward each other, their fitting and showing abilities, and for the improved quality of animals in the past four years since he last judged the show.

The project steers averaged $1.52 a pound.

Following is a partial listing of show placings.

4-H HAPPENINGS

Cumberland County 4-H'er Recognized

At a recent competition at Penn State, Jeremy Stets of Newville has been selected as the leading 4-H member in Pennsylvania in the Bicycle National Awards program. Stets is the son of Mike and Mary Stets and is a member of the Newville Smart Plugs 4-H Club.

In recognition of this accomplishment, Stets will be attending the five-day National 4-H Congress at the Chicago Hilton and Towers in December as a delegate representing Pennsylvania 4-H. This program, attended by more than 1,500 4-H members from across the country, is filled with recognition events and education tours and programs.

The path to Chicago began more than six years ago when Stets became a 4-H member. This spring, Stets was selected to represent Cumberland County in state competition. Following a review of his 4-H record, and a personal interview, he was selected to represent Pennsylvania at the 70th National 4-H Congress.

The Millcreek Grass Clippings Distributor(R) attaches easily to the top dresser and provides an adjustable pattern for spreading grass clippings on fairways and roughs.

Grass Clippings Become A Thing Of The Soil

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — The problem of what to do with grass clippings has been solved with a new attachment for the Millcreek Model 75TD and 50TD top dressers.

The Millcreek Grass Clippings Distributor(R) attaches easily to the top dresser and provides an adjustable pattern for spreading grass clippings on fairways and roughs.

Clippings are dispersed so finely they are hardly noticeable. Many experts feel such finely distributed clippings provide valuable nutrients for turf improvement.

In addition to extending the use of the top dresser, the Grass Clippings Distributor reduces costs and inconvenience of dumping clippings. The company says the Grass Clippings Distributor will be especially useful as more communities ban the dumping of clippings in landfills and incinerators.

The unit has been field tested at several golf courses and there is no noticeable accumulation of clippings to inconvenience golfers. In fact, several superintendents report an improvement in roughs as a result of finely spread clippings. The company says some golf courses participating in the tests have ordered their second Millcreek top dresser with a Grass Clippings Distributor attachment.

Pork Checkoff Dollars Going Up

DES MOINES, Iowa — The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) has announced that the national legislative pork checkoff rate will be raised to .35 of one percent of the value of each marketed animal effective Dec. 1 of this year. The increase is the first since the initial .25 of one percent assessment rate was established in 1986.

Daniel D. Haley, administrator of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, said the one-tenth of one percent checkoff increase was approved earlier this year by the National Pork Producers delegate body, the pork producers group which initiates action affecting the national pork promotion and research program.

The checkoff assessments are levied on the market value of live-hogs, when sold domestically or imported, and on imported pork products.

Harold Trask, a pork producer from Renwick, Iowa, who currently serves as president of the National Pork Board, said the increased checkoff will add $10-$12 million dollars a year to the program's $30 million dollar budget. The increase will allow the pork industry to fund and expand projects that will continue to advance pork in the marketplace.

Trask said the increase, among other things, will help finance expansion of the successful Pork-The Other White Meat® promotion campaign to reach nearly 100 percent of the U.S. consumers, instead of the approximately 58 percent at present.

"Over time, pork industry surveys have found that the vast majority of pork producers support the checkoff," said Trask. "In a survey conducted earlier this year, 65 percent of all producers said they felt checkoff-funded programs directly benefited them."

Air Planters Set Pace

COLDWATER, Ohio — White-New Idea Farm Equipment Company has introduced a new line of planters — the New Idea 9000 Air Planters.

White-New Idea has taken the time-proven air metering system and adapted it to the already successful line of New Idea planters. The 9000 air planter is available in double frame models to provide additional space for attachments. A new two-bushel hopper means fewer stops and less time refilling.

All models feature air metering, walking beam gauge wheels, state-of-the-art seed trench equipment, and many other features.

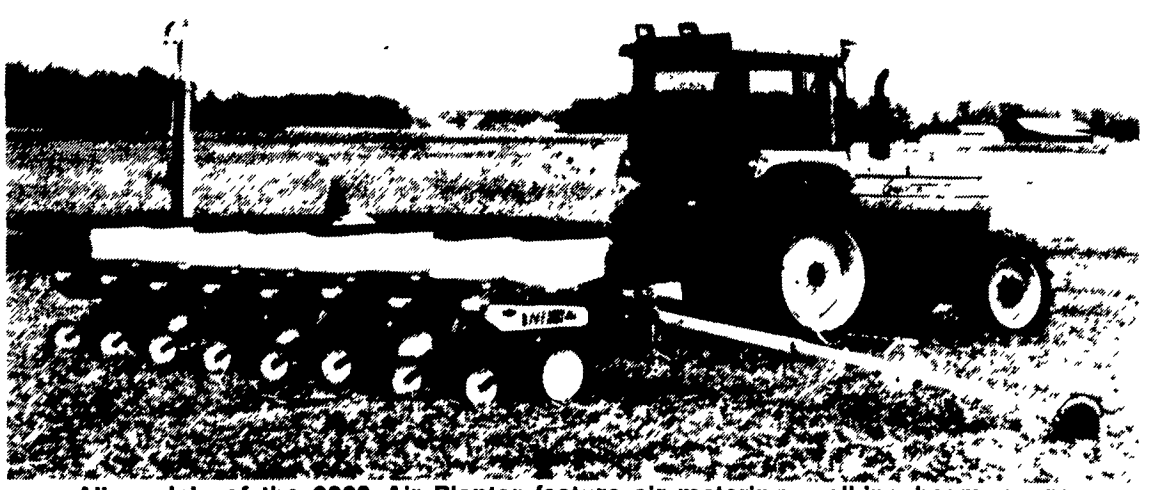
The 9000 air row unit sets the standard for accurate spacing and depth control. It also creates an environment for optimum germination and emergence. Low pressure, positive air metering singulates every seed, then drops it consistently through our 18-inch drop tube. That reduces bounce and roll.

Walking beam gauge wheels control seed depth, even in rough ground, and 1/8-inch depth adjustments provide unequalled depth control.

Population control is now easier with the 9000 air planters. The transmission is centrally located. All sprockets are in place and need only to be moved on the shaft to change population.

A variety of ground preparation and closing attachments are available to customize the planter to specific operations.

For product information, call (800) 767-3221.



All models of the 9000 Air Planter feature air metering, walking beam gauge wheels, seed trench equipment, and many other features.

9- To 10-Foot Cutting Widths Available

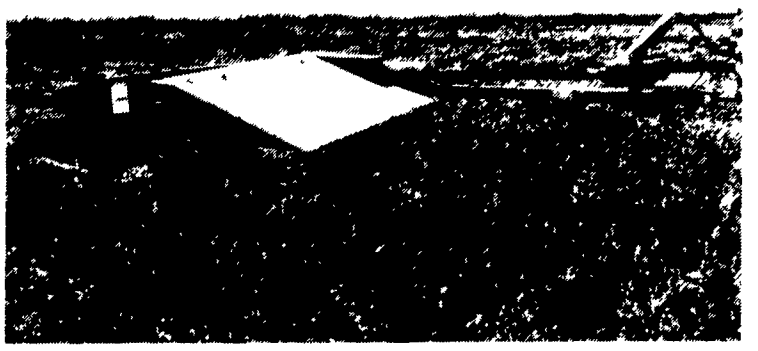
WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl Company is introducing two new, Gehl-designed and built disc mower conditioners, the models DC2340 and DC2360. The DC2340 features seven discs and a 9-foot 1-inch cutting width, while the DC2360 has eight discs and a 10-foot 4-inch cutting width.

Rugged, high-speed cutting discs spinning at 3,000 rpm slice through down and tangled crops or dense, wet undergrowth to deliver a clean cut. The cut crop is delivered to the intermeshing conditioning rolls for thorough, gentle conditioning and fast drying.

"Disc mower conditioners have become increasingly popular in recent years among North American hay growers," said Jim Phillips, Gehl product development manager for haytools. "These two new models offer a number of unique features to meet the needs of customers who want a disc-type machine."

The disc mower conditioners were designed from the ground up with the operator in mind. One example is the sturdy cutterbar support frame that extends beneath the entire cutterbar. Unlike competitive units that use the cutterbar as a frame member, the Gehl design cradles the cutterbar, protecting it from direct impact with rocks or other field obstructions.

In addition, the rugged trailer main frame is formed from a four-by-eight-inch structural steel tube for added strength and long life.



DC2340 disc mower conditioners features seven discs and a 9-foot 1-inch cutting width, while the DC2360 has eight discs and a 10-foot 4-inch cutting width.

The 540 or 1,000 rpm driveline features an equal-angle hitch for smooth power transfer. The driveline is protected by a combination slip clutch/over-running clutch.

The heart of the new Gehl disc mower conditioners is the reliable cutterbar. The gear-driven discs operate in an oil bath for less wear and long life. Each disc has two heavy-duty reversible knives for twice the cutting life.

The DC2340 and DC2360 disc mower conditioners also feature:

- Standard hydraulically controlled tongue to easily position the unit without leaving the tractor seat.
- A single gearbox, which drives both the cutterbar and conditioning rolls, for fewer moving parts.
- Hinged shields for easy access to the conditioning roll drive system and the cutterbar.
- Simple adjustment for changing from a windrow to a swath or adjusting the width of the windrow without tools.

For more details, contact your local Gehl dealer or write Gehl Company, Marketing Services Department, 143 Water St., West Bend, WI 53095.

AGCO/Deutz-Allis Warranty Improves Coverage

ATLANTA, Ga. — AGCO has introduced a new warranty program for its Deutz-Allis product line that offers more component coverage. It also includes an optional purchase of a deductible elimination contract that allows owners to have repairs made under the warranty without having to pay a deductible.

"Our warranty on combines is the longest and strongest in the industry," said John M. Shumejda, senior vice president, operations, for AGCO. "And our warranty on tractors compares quite favorably with those offered by any other agricultural equipment manufacturer."

The new warranty covers all combines and all tractors above 40 horsepower sold after July 1, 1991, for four years of 4,000 hours. It includes all components, except such wear items as belts, cutting parts, and frictional surfaces that can be expected to wear through normal use.

During the first two years of the warranty period, equipment owners are not required to pay a deductible amount on any warrantable repair. During the second two years, the deductible amount will be $250 per repair visit on tractors and $400 per repair visit on combines.

Owners can avoid having to pay the decuctibles, however, by purchasing a deductible elimination contract. The list price of the contract ranges from $430 for a tractor under 49.9 horsepower to $2,550 for an R70 or R72 combine. Buyers have 60 days from the delivery date to purchase the contract.

Let's face it... voting is a little like doing farm chores.

If we don't roll up our sleeves and get the job done, the mess will just keep getting worse.

Fellow Farmers and Rural Citizens,

We've got some chores to do on Tuesday, November 5. There is a special election for the U.S. Senate, and we need to send a message.

Despite dairy prices that are far below the cost of production, the President insists that he will veto any increase in the support price, and any effort to provide dairy producers with a supply management program.

At the same time, drought relief needs are ignored, and the Administration continues to push for a so-called "free" trade agreement that will trade away our Section 22 import controls, weaken sanitary standards on imported foods, and move American jobs to low paying countries.

Something is very wrong here.

The members of the League of Rural Voters believe that there is a very effective way for us to send a clear message that our farms and small towns will not be taken for granted. We are asking our fellow rural citizens to join us in casting a protest vote next Tuesday for Harris Wofford for Senator.

Harris Wofford is committed to supporting fair prices and fair trade. He understands that health insurance is not something our families can wait on forever. He knows that farmers are not asking for a handout, but simply for the right to produce America's food in a profitable, sustainable, and efficient manner.

No matter how you usually vote, join us in voting for Wofford for Senate on Tuesday, and help nail a message to the Congressional wall.

Remember, if you've got a vote... then you've got a hammer.

Next Tuesday... let's nail a message on the Congressional wall.

Vote - Wofford for Senate

Trees Save Money, Help Environment

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Trees planted in the right places around your home can save you money and benefit the environment.

"Shade from strategically located trees can reduce a homeowner's summer cooling needs by 75 percent in certain types of homes," said Bryan Swistock, project assistant in Penn State's College of Agriculture. Trees planted in windbreaks also can cut heating bills up to 15 percent.

Residential heating and cooling acconts for about 11 percent of total U.S. energy use. "If windbreaks and shade trees lowered heating and cooling energy needs by 10 percent at the residential level, total U.S. energy demand would decrease by about 1 percent," said Swistock.

How do trees help? In summer, shade from trees masks sunlight, reducing heat inside homes. In winter, blowing wind and temperature differences between indoors and outside may cause the air in a house to change entirely several times an hour. Windbreaks block and lift wind currents, so less cold air gets driven inside.

The more energy saved at the household level, the less carbon dioxide will be emitted by utility companies. Large amounts of this gas and other "greenhouse" gases in the atmosphere are thought to cause higher global average temperatures.

By consuming carbon dioxide and producing oxygen, trees may help combat global warming.

Trees have other benefits. Windbreaks absorb noise from busy highways and industrial plants; and they provide screening and help block snow. Trees also afford protection and food for songbirds, pheasants, rabbits, and other wildlife.

"Early spring generally is the best time to plant, but balled and burlap-wrapped trees may be planted in fall if given proper winter care," said Swistock. "Container plants can be planted any time the soil is not frozen."

For more information on planting trees, choosing species and estimating costs, consult "Windbreaks and Shade Trees", newly released by Penn State's College of Agriculture. Two Area Farms Will Showcase Pollution, Erosion Control

WEST CHESTER (Chester Co.)— The Chester County Conservation District has started to make two area farms into demonstration projects that will showcase techniques farmers can use in a coordinated plan to control erosion and pollution on their own farms.

A variety of these techniques, called best management practices or BMPs, will be installed at the Modern Mushroom Farms Inc., operation in Avondale and Barclay and Diana Hoopes' 282-acre dairy farm in Landenberg.

For mushroom farms, typical BMPs include runoff storage ponds, curbing, and swales that prevent contaminated rainwater from draining into nearby streams after coming into contact with raw spent compost. For other types of farming, similar runoff controls divert clean water around barnyards. Manure storage systems also help keep runoff water pure. Techniques such as contour plowing, terrace systems, and pasture rotation are used to prevent soil erosion.

The Soil Conservation Service/ USDA and the Chester County Conservation District offer technical help to individual farmers who want to install a coordinated system of BMPs designed for their particular farms. These systems preserve farmland and prevent silt, bacteria, agricultural fertilizers, and other pollutants from escaping into nearby waterways.

Once the coordinated BMP systems are installed at the demonstration farms, area farmers will be able to inspect them and discuss them with peers.

Conservation district officials believe that farmers who can see a coordinated BMP plan in use will be encouraged to seek technical help from SCS personnel in setting up their own water quality and resource management plans. In doing so, these farmers can help control erosion and pollution and avoid the fines and other penalties that regulatory agencies such as the state department of environmental resources (DEP) levy on polluters. Local conservation districts generally are not a regulatory agency, but, rather encourage and support voluntary compliance with state and federal environmental regulations.

Up to 80 percent of the installation costs of the demonstration projects will be paid by a $142,000 grant from the federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). This money came to the Chester County Conservation District through the EPA's Delaware Estuary Program. The DEP's goal is to maintain water quality in all the streams, creeks, and rivers that flow into the Delaware Bay.

Local sponsors for the demonstration projects include the American Mushroom Institute and the Red Clay Creek Watershed Association.

Grange Reports More Members

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "We must be doing something right," said Robert Barrow, master of the National Grange, when he announced recently a net increase in Grange membership.

"Our national membership stabilized around 300,000 for quite a few years," said Barrow. "Every year we gained new members, but for one reason or another, we always lost a little more than we gained," he said.

"About five years ago, we realized we needed to expand our horizons," said Barrow. "We had to make some hard choices based on the country's drastically changing demographics. Many of our Grange communities were changing from country to suburban. Consequently, we began to add to our identity as a leading farm organization, primarily representing economic interests of farmers. We expanded our community service activities and began to offer member benefits programs. We also instituted an associate member program to accommodate those who wanted to support our goals but were unable to be active members. All of these changes have made us one of the few national organizations today that can report an increase in membership" he said.

Trostle Tops York 4-H Lamb Roundup

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — A homebred Hampshire from the family flock took light heavyweight division and grand champion honors at the York County 4-H Lamb Roundup for exhibitor Matt Trostle of Red Lion.

The champion commanded top price in the annual roundup sale for bidder Merrill Crone, gypsy moth program coordinator for York County. Crone's winning bid was $1.80 per pound for the 115-pound purebred wether. The sale, held October 21, capped the annual two-day roundup show and auction event at Weikert's Buying Station.

Trostle, a 13-year-old veteran sheep showman, snagged the champion honors over a field of nearly 50 lamb roundup competitors. It was the second roundup champ for the 4-H shepherd, who credited the win to a regular exercise program he uses for his project lambs. Matt is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Trostle.

Reserve champion honors went to Jennifer Flinchbaugh, also exhibiting a purebred Hampshire wether which earlier won its heavyweight division.

Weighing in at 125 pounds, the reserve champion followed second in the sale lineup. Winning buyer was Tony Dobrosky, representing the Glatfelter Agri-Business Insurance Center of York, with a final bid of $1.40 per pound.

Jennifer, 10, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ed Keeney, York, and a second-year 4-H lamb exhibitor. She attributed her reserve placing to a feeding ration of corn, oats and soybeans, along with exercising her lamb through a daily jumping routine.

Champion mediumweight, exhibited by Kelly Dutrey, Dallastown, sold to Mac Jones Ford. The Red Lion automotive dealership paid $1.10 per pound for the 110-pound lamb.

C. Gerry Stinson was the winning bidder for the champion lightweight, exhibited by Glen Rock 4-H'er Cindy Dehoff. Price for the 85-pound lamb was $1.15 per pound.

A $1.25 bid from Wintergarden Salad Company bought the reserve light heavyweight, a 110-pounder shown by Kelly Myers of Thomasville.

Mike Klinedinst, Stewartstown, exhibited the 120-pound reserve heavyweight, purchased for $1.15 per pound by Hopewell Veterinary Service, Stewartstown.

Reserve mediumweight honors went to Jodi Dutrey, Dallastown. Successful bidder on her 105-pound lamb was Emerson Knaper, with a final bid of $1.10 per pound.

The bid of $1.15 per pound bought the reserve lightweight for the Glatfelter Insurance Agency, York. Emily Bankert, Red Lion, exhibited the 75-pound winner.

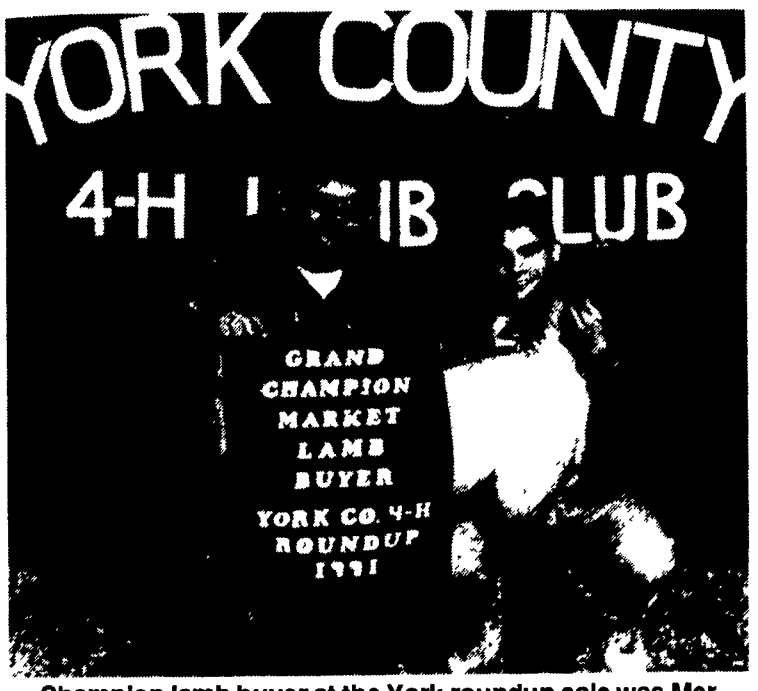
Average for the lamb sale, including champion price, was $1.02, and without the champion averaged $.99.

Stewartstown exhibitor Mike Klinedinst bested all the competition in the showing-fitting runoffs, taking both overall titles and a revolving trophy sponsored by York Farm Credit.

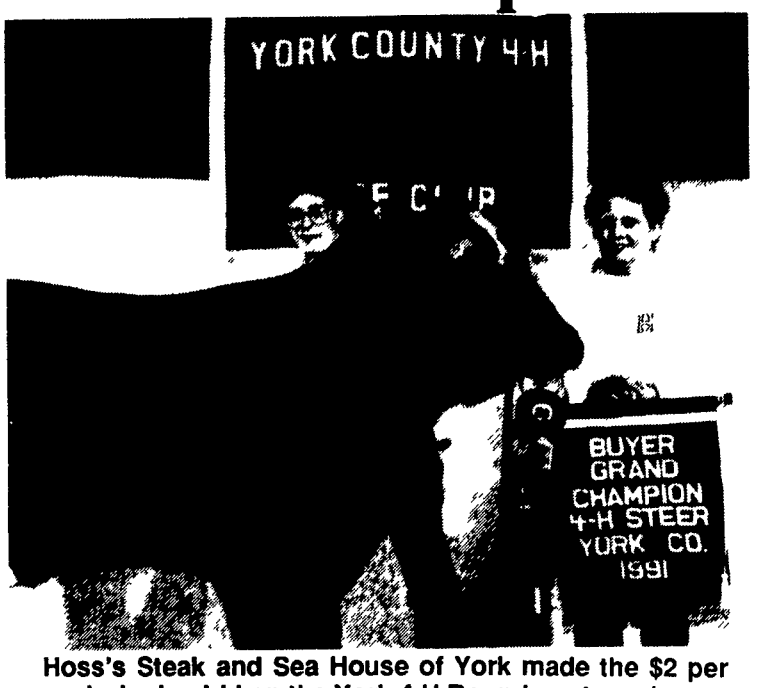
Reserve champion fitter was Matt Trostle and Kelly Dutrey was named reserve champion showman. Senior fitting winners were Mike Klinedinst, first; Lisa Dehoff, second; and Jodi Dutrey, third. Intermediate fitting winners were Matt Trostle, first; Kelly Jo Myers, second; and Joey Sweitzer, third. Kelly Dutrey topped the junior fitting over second-placed Jennifer Flinchbaugh and third-placed Buffy Dehoff.

Mike Klinedinst topped Matt Sellers, second, and Dave Myers, third, for the senior showman class. Intermediate showman was won by Adam Sellers, over Kelly Jo Myers, second, and Matt Trostle, third. In the junior divisions, Kelly Dutrey bested Jennifer Flinchbaugh, second, and Mark Albright, third.

A partial list of placings for the York market lamb roundup follows.



Champion lamb buyer at the York roundup sale was Merrill Crone, the county's gypsy moth program coordinator, who bid $1.80 per pound for Matt Trostle's 115-pound winning Hampshire homebred wether.



Hoss's Steak and Sea House of York made the $2 per pound winning bid on the York 4-H Roundup steer champion, a crossbred exhibited by Shawn Waltimyer. Representing Hoss's is Maureen Grinnell. The restaurant then donated the 1280-pound steer back, and bought it a second time, to benefit the county's meat judging team.

Farmers Asked For Nominations

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)— Farmers are asked to nominate candidates of their choice by October 28 to be on the ASC Lancaster County LAA1 community committee ballot, said Paul B. Kline, Lancaster County ASC chairman.

The ASC Lancaster County LAA1 committee elections will be conducted from November 22 to December 2 by mail ballot. The LAA1 ASC communities in Lancaster County are Conoy, East and West Donegal, Elizabeth, East and West Hempfield, Manheim, Manor, Mount Joy, Penn, Rapho, and Warwick townships.

ASC committees are responsible for managing federal farm programs on the local level. To meet the needs of individual producers, ASC committee members must be concerned and responsible individuals, Kline said. Lancaster County farmers have the opportunity to nominate people they believe would best serve the farm community. Farmers have received petition forms by mail and are now submitting them to the county ASCS office.

A few basic considerations should be kept in mind when circulating petitions, Kline said. In order to be valid, petitions must be limited to one nominee each, must include written certification that the nominee is willing to serve if elected, must be signed by at least three eligible farm votes in the ASC community, and must be received in the county ASCS office by the October 29 deadline.

Farmers may circulate or sign nominating petitions for as many candidates as they choose. Anyone wishing to nominate a farmer for the ASC committee election may contact the county ASCS office for full details, including eligibility requirements for office holders.

"Farmers should petition for and elect those individuals they feel would do a good job as a member of the ASC committee. The election of concerned farmers to positions on ASC committees is essential in the administration of farm programs," Kline said.

Kline further explained that the county ASCS office welcomes all valid petitions. The opportunity to nominate, vote, and be elected to office is guaranteed to all farmers regardless of race, color, religion, sex, age, marital status, handicap, or national origin.

Bedding Materials Are Scarce

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State University

During the last decade or two, we have seen the price of bedding materials increase and the supply nearly disappear in some areas or during some months of the year.

No answers to scarce bedding are evident in the near future. Here are some thoughts to examine. Most of these involve risk and field testing to make them work. If you test new unproven bedding materials, beware — it can be risky! The following ideas do not constitute a recommendation, only some thoughts to study.

• Move new poultry meat production birds to the geographical source of bedding. There, we have unmanured soil on which to spread used litter. Trucking fresh bedding or used litter long distances (80 miles plus) is expensive.

• Move excess used litter and manure off farms 30 miles or more for use as a fertilizer to reduce nutrient load on local farms. Backhaul straw or bedding in clean trucks.

• Grind up and convert industrial waste products to safe bedding materials such as hardwood bark, spent mushroom compost, cornstalks left in the fields, or dry hay or grass with low nutrient quality. All of these need testing to determine if they are safe and practical. Testing new bedding materials requires laboratory work and field testing so as not to cause bird health problems, foodborne residues, pollution, or death of birds.

• Start with two to six inches of chopped straw and wood shavings as bedding and allow it to compost so that reuse of composted litter which is virtually disease free can replace the supply of new bedding. This is known as a deep litter system and, if true composting occurs during grow-out, more than one flock may be grown on litter. Composted litter may be dusty.

• Develop soft (friendly) wire, plastic or wood floors to on which to start or grow meat birds that eliminates the need for bedding. Past attempts at this have usually failed. Discovery of new flooring materials could make this more practical. New and better ideas are needed and are not available. Some turkey growers still start birds in batteries.

• Develop a mobile bedding applicator so that bedding (such as shavings) can be added by hand or mechanically added to floor pens every week at ¼ inch depth per application rather than starting with deeper litter. This may reduce the need to use so much total bedding. After cleaning, one turkey farmer applies new bedding in empty house with an old manure spreader. Another turkey farmer adds bedding every week or more as needed for growing turkeys.

• Give birds more floor space per bird or give them a roost or resting stool to reduce the need for bedding by allowing urine and feces more space and time to dry on the floor. Remember housing cost per pound of bird produced is a relatively low cost item compared to feed, bird, or labor cost. That way, if feed is saved and meat tonnage sold at a profit increases, this can be a valuable change. On the range, a roosting area with a floor may be built to catch and store manure for spreading elsewhere.

• Haul used litter out of houses to a composter or converter (aerator), then haul it back in as bedding to reuse after old litter has been converted to a better quality product.

• Pile, wet, mix, aerate, and compost litter in piles in house between flocks if possible, then respread and reuse it. This has been done successfully in only a few cases.

• Bring a grain roaster in meat bird house area and roast and pasteurize used manure-litter mixture and place it back on floor for use as bedding. Used litter has been successfully roasted for beef feed; therefore, it could be tried as bedding material.

• Stack semi-truckloads of used manure-litter mixture on fields away from water sheds where water runoff is controlled, and punch several thousand 1-inch holes 12-18 inches deep in pile and mix with front end loader every 5-10 days. After 3 mixing replications, allow to lay for several weeks, then spread. This product can be composted and may work well as a soil amendment and fertilizer, but has not been tested as bedding. Before stacking manure, check for any government ordinances that may relate to this practice.

If you have a new bedding material to test, try it out carefully, observing toxicity, absorbency, ability to give off moisture, relative troubles with breast blisters, bruises, feet and gut disorders, and other injuries.

Any time new bedding is tried, there is a risk of failure, so be ready to finance the problems. Ask many questions of your service person and read before trying new bedding materials.

A list of research abstracts will later be available from Poultry Extension, 213 Henning Building, Penn State University, University Park, PA 16802 at no cost to the requestor. If you wish one sent to you, write or call (814) 865-5573.

Note: Ground-up used automobile tires may someday be tested for bedding, but are not recommended because we have no information on their use.

Any way you add it up

Conference Debates State Water Plan

LEESPORT (Berks Co.)— A new state water plan and the ranking of Pennsylvania's watersheds for agricultural pollution were just two important issues debated at the 44th Joint Annual Conference of the State Conservation (PACD) Commission and the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts (PACD).

Jack W. Schonely, district manager of the Berks County Conservation District, was among the 220 conservation leaders from throughout the state who attended the conference recently in Altoona.

In line with the conference theme "Cooperative Planning in Conservation," the State Conservation Commission heard the results of a two-year study that evaluated the agricultural nonpoint source pollution potential of Pennsylvania's 104 watersheds.

Based on this new information, the commission was charged with identifying which watersheds in the bay drainage basin should be targeted for Chesapeake Bay Program assistance.

In an effort to better target limited cost-sharing assistance to help farmers install conservation practices, the commission acted to bring new, high priority counties into the program while eliminating a few counties no longer considered high priority.

Building a new state water plan was another key issue discussed by the conference attendees.

"Regional and statewide interests need to be addressed in a state water plan," said Timothy Weston, an attorney expert in water resource management issues.

Debate centered on the development of a water plan that would reflect regional water interests yet respect interbasin water relationships. Assuring an adequate water supply is a growing concern in Pennsylvania, given recurring droughts in regions of the state.

In other business, PACD reelected for a second term the following association officers: president- Melvin Worley, Adams County; first vice president- Robert Wagner, Lancaster County; second vice president- James Bear, Cumberland County; treasurer- Bernard Hoffnar; and Anne Bates, secretary.

State Grange Opens Convention

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Pennsylvania State Grange Master (president) William H. Ringler officially opened the 119th Annual State Session by outlining the year's activities of the Grange, including testifying at dairy hearings and against Susquehanna River monitoring fees, attending drought meetings, and visiting Washington, D.C. with other concerns.

Ringler spoke before the more than 600 Grange members on Monday at the Jaffa Mosque in Altoona.

The delegate body and appointed committees will review and act on more than 120 resolutions that will form the Grange's policy for the upcoming year. Some of the issues before this year's delegates are wetlands, funding for the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board, school strikes, national health care, living wills, and nutrient management.

"We testified at a Game Commission hearing concerning hunting season and deer management," Ringler said about this year's legislative activities. "We also lobbied for agricultural funding during the budget process, testified before the House Agriculture Committee on nutrient management legislation, and before the Senate Environmental Resources and Energy Committee on wetlands legislation."

Master Ringler also spoke about goals for the future of the Grange, including developing guidelines for community service through training and promotion, finding ways to resolve issues identified and supported by concerned citizens, and increasing membership.

The State Grange's convention will continue throughout the week with meetings and speakers at the Jaffa Mosque. The Pennsylvania State Grange represents more than 35,000 rural Pennsylvanians.

MILK AMERICA'S HEALTH KICK

Beef Rep Applications Sought

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Beef Council is currently accepting applications for the 1992 Beef Industry Representatives and Veal Ambassadors Program.

The program is designed to provide an opportunity for interested individuals, ages 18-23, to promote beef and veal to consumers at various functions, including through retail promotions, community and health fairs, and mall exhibits throughout the summer. Students selected are reimbursed for their time and expenses.

"The Beef Industry Representative/Veal Ambassador program is an excellent opportunity for students to gain valuable marketing and sales experience," said David Ivan, executive director of the Beef Council. "If an individual is interested in agriculture and marketing, this program is an ideal work experience."

In addition to the beef industry representative and veal ambassadors, the Pennsylvania Cattlemen's Association will select a "Cattlemen's Queen" among interested female candidates. The Cattlemen's Queen will represent the association at various beef producer functions throughout the year.

Interested individuals are asked to contact the Pennsylvania Beef Council at (800) 572-2020 for an application. All applications must be sent to the Pennsylvania Beef Council's office by March 2, 1992.

Pork Prose

PHYTASE SHOWS POTENTIAL FOR REDUCING PHOSPHORUS

Most swine producers realize phosphorus is an important nutrient for pigs of all sizes. It plays a vital role in most biochemical reactions in the body. And because phosphorus contributes a large portion of the bone matrix, it's needed in much greater amounts than other elements like iron and zinc.

That's bad news for several reasons. First, the phosphorus in plant-based ingredients is not easily digested by the pig. Only about 15 percent of the phosphorus in a typical corn-soybean meal mixture is available to the pig. So we have to "over-supplement" to make up for this poor digestibility. Second, phosphorus is not cheap. A pound of dicalcium phosphate (dical) costs about $.18. Since dical contains less than 20 percent phosphorus, you're actually paying close to $1.00 for every pound of phosphorus that must be added to the diet.

Another concern is environmental. All of the undigested phosphorus ends up in the manure which is eventually spread on the field. Crops need phosphorus, but not as much as is supplied by the manure. So a corn field that's subject to continual application of hog manure will eventually build up excessive levels of phosphorus. Any soil erosion or manure runoff would then contribute to phosphorus pollution in streams.

So there are lots of reasons for wanting to reduce phosphorus supplementation. Phytase is a product that will potentially enable us to do that. This is a feed-grade enzyme that breaks down the undigestible form of phosphorus (phytate) in plant ingredients.

Dr. Gary Cromwell has been conducting a series of experiments at the University of Kentucky with growing pigs and phytase. And he's finding that it works. Most growing-finishing diets contain about .5 percent phosphorus. By adding phytase, the dietary level can be cut to about .30 percent without sacrificing bone strength or growth performance. That would save about $2.50 per ton of feed based on today's prices.

Unfortunately, phytase is not an everyday feed additive. The product used by Dr. Cromwell is produced in Finland using genetically altered bacteria and is not yet commercially available in this country.

Alltech, a company based in Nicholasville, Ky., is working on an enzyme preparation (Allzyme Phytase) that has phytase activity. This product, likewise, is not yet commercially available.

Dr. Cromwell notes that the enzyme activity will vary from one product to another. So once products come on the market, producers will have to compare more than just price.

Nitrofurazone And Furazolidone To Be Taken Off Market

Nitrofurazone and furazolidone will no longer be available after January 31, 1992.

SmithKline Beecham and Hess, Inc. manufactured the products, which were used in feed, water, and as an oral pump. Most producers used these medications for E. coli scours.

The two drugs apparently will be pulled from the market because "furazolidone and its metabolites have been shown to induce cancer" in laboratory tests, and they were "not safe under the conditions of use for which they were approved," according to FDA Commissioner David Kessler.

Mystery Swine Disease Unlocked?

After five years of frustration, a major clue to the cause of Mystery Swine Disease may have been found.

Lou Harris of Boehringer Ingelheim Animal Health, Inc. recently isolated a virus that reproduces the respiratory and reproductive symptoms of the disease which is now referred to as Swine Infertility and Respiratory Syndrome (SIRS).

SIRS is characterized by a rise in stillborns, abortions, preweaning mortality, and flu-like symptoms. This disease is apparently similar and may the same as one called "Blue Ear" in Europe.

If the virus associated with Blue Ear is found to be the same as the one responsible for SIRS, U.S. and European scientists will likely collaborate on future research.

Piglets dosed intranasally with the SIRS virus developed the same lung lesions found in the disease. And sows inoculated with the virus farrowed characteristic mummified and stillborn pigs.

Vaccine development is not yet under way, but company officials are optimistic that an effective vaccine is forthcoming.

I spoke with Dr. Larry Hutchinson recently about the discovery. While he admits the finding is significant, he cautions that this viral agent may not be the only pathogen involved.

"We know, for example, that several organisms contribute to the shipping fever problem in cattle. And we may find that this syndrome in hogs may also be caused by more than one viral or bacterial agent," Hutchinson said.

Keystone Interantional Barrow Show Report

The results from the carcass barrow contest at the Keystone International Livestock Exposition are available.

Our congratulations go to Vern Hazlett and Dave Hosterman at Penn State for exhibiting the grand champion barrow carcass, to Derek Earnhart of Indiana for exhibiting the junior champion barrow carcass, and to Brandon Forry of Lancaster County for exhibiting the champion production class barrow.

For a copy of the report, contact me at (814) 863-3671.

Feeds And Feeding Short Course

A Feeds and Feeding Short Course will be held at the Alwine Civic Center, November 26.

The Civic Center is located in Westmoreland County about three miles south of Route 22 near the intersection of Routes 993 and 66. The short course will include on-site demonstrations of proper handling of a portable grinder mixer, as well as seminars on drug handling and practical feeding recommendations for all ages of pigs.

The short course will be held from 9 a.m. until about 3:30 p.m. and will cost $6 per person. For a copy of the program, call me at (814) 863-3671 or write to me at 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802.

Similar short courses are planned for a number of eastern counties during late winter and early spring, 1992.

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING

A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that

- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

CONSTRUCTED FOR YEARS OF MAINTENANCE-FREE SERVICE.

Look over these outstanding features.

- Less weight. Eby aluminum bodies weigh up to 30% less than comparable steel and wood construction.
- Less maintenance. Aluminum construction won't rust or rot - never needs painting.
- Long-life durability. Heavy-duty structural components and hollow-tube frame combine with aluminum floor and sides to stand up to years of hard work.

"We have over 1/3 first calf heifers in the milking herd. When I wormed with Master Mix Ruma Worm, I saw a big improvement in milk production & body conditioning in those heifers. I think regular deworming makes a big difference, especially in a young herd."

York Beef Champion Benefits Judging Team

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

THOMASVILLE (York Co.) — One trip through the auction area wasn't enough for the champion steer at the annual York County 4-H beef roundup sale, held October 21 at Weikert's Buying Station.

Hoss's Steak and Sea House Restaurant of York paid $2 per pound for Shawn Waltimyer's 1,280-pound crossbred champion, then donated the steer back to be sold again to benefit the county's 4-H meats judging team.

Second time through the ring, "Whoopie Pie," the black steer with the crooked splotch of white on his head, brought a second, 87-cent bid from the York restaurant.

The champion win was the second for exhibitor Shawn Waltimyer of Airville, who took similar honors at the recent York Fair steer competition. The steer was from the beef herd of Waltimyer's grandfather, Donald Walters, Airville.

Hoss's continued their bidding ways for the second steer on the block, the reserve champion winner shown by Robin Shive, Seven Valleys. Their $2 bid bought the 1,240-pound "Fred," a purebred Angus purchased as a calf from Riley Farms in New York.

A $1 per pound bid from Delwood Kitchens of Hanover took the champion heavyweight, a 1,315-pound steer shown by Tammi Grubb, Hanover.

R.S. Delp Contractors were the winning bidder on the reserve champion lightweight, paying 91-cents-pound for the 1,195-pound steer exhibited by Jason Rankin, Abbottstown.

Suzanne Bishard, York, exhibited the reserve champion medium weight, which sold for $1.02 per pound to Bishard Insurance of York.

Hoke Mills of Abbottstown and York claimed the reserve champion heavyweight with a bid of 85 cents for the 1,335-pounder exhibited by Jennifer Altobelli, Dover.

Average price for the 30 roundup steers, including the champion, was $90.76 per cwt. Price without the champion averaged $82.99.

Showmanship winners were named in four age categories during the roundup competition the day prior to the sale. Novice category winners were Tammi Grubb, Hanover, first; Matthew Altobelli, Dover, second; and Jamie Reid, Dallastown, third.

First in the junior division was Suzanne Bishard, York, over Elizabeth Bishard, York, second, and Jennifer Altobelli, Dover, third. Intermediate honors went to Joyce Stough, Seven Valleys, first; Daniel Gross, Manchester, second; and Jason Rankin, Abbottstown, third. Seedling Cost-Sharing Available

SPRING GROVE (York Co.) — Now is the time to plan for tree planting to be done in the spring of 1992.

The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company, Spring Grove, will once again share the cost of tree seedlings with interested landowners.

Since the inception of the company program in 1951, more than 19 million seedlings have been furnished to landowners in these southcentral Pennsylvania counties: Adams, Berks, Cumberland, Dauphin, Franklin, Fulton, Huntingdon, Juniata, Lancaster, Lebanon, Mifflin, Northumberland, Perry, Schuylkill, Snyder, and York.

Glatfelter will cover up to one half of the cost of seedlings ordered by individual landowners. Tree seedlings available under this year's program include Virginia pine, Japanese larch, White pine, Red pine, White spruce and Norway spruce. All seedlings are furnished by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources. Orders will be filled on a first-come, first-served basis.

The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company imposes no restrictions of any kind, but landowners must comply with state regulations regarding the planting of these trees. Pennsylvania regulations include:

- Trees may not be used for Christmas trees, decorative or ornamental uses, or for windbreaks.
- The minimum acceptable order is for 500 seedlings which will plant 3/4 acre.
- All trees become the property of the landowner who may harvest them at a future date for any wood product.

For information about placing your order, see your local county agent, your Bureau of Forestry district office, or write directly to The Glatfelter Pulp Wood Company, Spring Grove, PA 17362, (717) 225-4711.

Livestock Notes

Keystone Shepherd's Symposium

An outstanding program has been planned for this year's Shepherds' Symposium that you will not want to miss.

Enclosed is a complete program for the event, but the following are a few highlights:

- Dr. Don Bailey, DVM from Oregon is an outstanding speaker.
- Dr. Harold Harpster, Penn State, speaker and nutritionist.
- Workshop on grading market lambs including hands-on grading of market lambs and evaluating the same lambs after being slaughtered.
- Forage van will be at the symposium to demonstrate and test forages. This year's symposium will be held at the Ramada Inn, West Middlesex, Pa., in Mercer County, just off Interstate 80 and Route 18 interchange.

Production Efficiency Important

Sheep producers, or any livestock producer, must improve production efficiency in order to remain competitive in a depressed market.

As you are aware, the lamb and wool market has been depressed for most of the year. The hog market has dropped to the low $40s compared to the high $50s at this time last year. Fed cattle market is in the mid to low $60s as compared to mid to high $70s this time last year. Basically, the lamb market is almost the same as this time last year, except there is a bigger spread in lamb prices this year. Poorer lambs, or lower yielding lambs, are being discounted more than in previous years.

With the situation in mind, we need to try to improve our efficiency of production. The following are a few recommendations or considerations:

- Test your forages to determine the quality so you will be able to develop a balanced ration that can meet the needs of your sheep and/or livestock.
- Match the quality and quantity of feed to the nutrient requirements of the flock. Periods of higher nutrient requirements are ewes in late gestation and early lactation, lactating ewes with twins or triplets, fast growing lambs, and two weeks prior to breeding.
- Use what forages and/or cover crops that you have available to help lower feed costs, such as meadow aftermath, corn stalks, pumpkins, apples, rye, etc.
- Develop a grazing system so you can make better utilization of the pasture you have.
- Treat sheep/lambs for internal parasites so that you will not have to feed the parasites too.
- Sell or separate ewes that are not going to lamb. These ewes only need a maintenance ration.
- If low on feed, but have adequate pasture, you may breed ewes to lamb in the spring on pasture which should reduce your feed costs as compared to winter lambing.
- Do your best to save every lamb by providing extra care and management during the first day after birth.
- If you have a fall or winter lambing program, and you do not creep-feed the young lambs, you are limiting the growth potential of those lambs. Feed efficiency on young lambs is very good, and may be as high as one pound of gain per three pounds of feed.
- Normally lamb prices are highest in late winter/early spring.

The important thing to look at, is your situation. When and how do you have the potential to make the most net returns/dollars? If you have some production cost figures from your operation, you can look at what you can do to improve your situation. You might have more net income by selling pasture born/raised lambs at $40/cwt than winter lambs selling at $60/cwt. What price do we need to get for our lambs to break even? Is it $40, $60, what?

Pruning Is Focus Of Landscape Program

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension is sponsoring the Professional Landscape Management Program, "Focus on Pruning," here Thursdays in 1992 — on January 30 and February 6, 13, 20, and 27.

"Today's society continues to place a greater emphasis on the environment in which we live, work and play," said H. Bruce Hellerick, Lancaster horticulture agent. "The most visible aspect of one's environment, commercial or home, is the horticultural landscape which surrounds us.

"As the public becomes more educated and sensitive to the issues of proper horticultural and pest control techniques, the professional must be prepared to respond with factual information and skills to compete in today's economy," he said.

The future demand for services from knowledgeable and skilled horticulturalists is strong. "Focus On Pruning" will provide participants with a focused time of educational information in the area of landscape management that integrates horticultural classroom theory with practical hands-on experience.

The programs are designed for professional landscape managers, lawn care professionals, contractors, designers, nursery personnel, garden center employees, and arborists.

Topics include:

- Pruning Through the Ages.
- Pruning Theory.
- What Goes On Inside the Plant When It is Pruned.
- Selecting and Caring for Your Equipment.
- Pruning Roses.
- Pruning Annuals and Perennials.
- Pruning Deciduous Shrubs.
- Pruning Broadleaved Evergreens.
- Pruning Needled Evergreens.
- Pruning Hedges.
- Pruning Deciduous Trees.
- Pruning Topiary, Vines and Espaliers.

To fill this need, Lancaster County Cooperative Extension has developed the Professional Landscape Management Program for the years 1992-1995. Each program will be five one-day classes and will include:

- Pruning Ornamental Plants (Year 1992).
- Tree Identification (Year 1992).
- Shrub Identification (Year 1993).
- Diseases of Ornamentals (Year 1993).
- Landscape Design (Year 1994).
- Turf Management (Year 1994).
- Insects of Ornamentals (Year 1995).
- Landscape Renovation (Year 1995).

Instructors for this program are from the following organizations: Colonial Williamsburg, Delaware Valley College, Longwood Gardens, Masonic Homes, Morris Arboretum (University of Pennsylvania), National Arboretum (Washington, D.C.), Penn State University, and Scott Arboretum (Swarthmore College).

For more information, contact H. Bruce Hellerick, Penn State Cooperative Extension, 1383 Arcadia Road, Room 1, Lancaster, PA 17601, (717) 394-6851.

Japanese Visitors Attend Forage Program

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — Two Pennsylvania farmers had a special visitor from Japan recently.

Toshihide Higashide, seed manager for Cargill North Asia Ltd., is visting the Cargill Seed Division in the U.S. for three weeks.

Higashide was in Pennsylvania to attend a forage quality training meeting for Cargill seed dealers hosted by Jim Beck, forage quality program manager.

Cargill's program, in conjuction with Michigan State University, has shown that corn hybrids not only have differences in grain and tonnage yield potential, but they also differ in protein, energy, and intake potential.

Cargill said the program is very important to Japanese farmers since every acre of corn is chopped for silage in Japan.

The herd average for Japanese farmers is 12,000-13,000 pounds. While in Pennsylvania, Higashide visited two dairy farms, Chester Horst, Greencastle, and Stoner's Hijos Hill, Mercersburg.

Stoner's Hijos is currently milking 250 cows. As soon as their new dairy barn is completed, they will be milking 500, with a goal of milking 1,000 cows.

Higashide told Stoner he would be back to see his new dairy barn in operation.

Search For Ag Hall Of Famers Begins

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Governor William Donald Schaefer announced the search has begun for the 1992 Agricultural "Hall of Fame" candidates.

"This 'Hall of Fame' recognizes farmers and their families for their tremendous contributions to agriculture in Maryland," Governor Schaefer said.

This award was created by the governor last year to honor leaders in the agriculture industry who exemplify high standards of achievement and commitment to the community.

Nominating committees are being created in each county. A governor's selection committee, chaired by the secretary of agriculture, includes the director of the Maryland Cooperative Extension Service, president of the Maryland Farm Bureau, master of the Maryland State Grange, two other members named by the secretary, and a winner from the previous year. This committee will review all county nominations and select award winners.

The governor will induct the winning families into the "Hall" at the Maryland agricultural dinner on February 6, 1992.

The Department of Agriculture has established a highly visible area at the headquarters building where the perpetual plaque and photographs of these honorees will be displayed for viewing by visitors and the general public. It was formally dedicated on October 17 by Governor Schaefer and Secretary of Agricultural Wayne A. Cawley, Jr.

For more information on the selection process and the name of the coordinator for your county, call Suzie Harrison at (301) 841-5770.

VOTE NOVEMBER 5th
United States Senator
Harris Wofford
A friend to Agriculture

Liz Koones/Daily News

Sen. Harris Wofford (right) and Charles Bomgardner examine a shriveled ear of corn on Bomgardner's farm in North Annville, Lebanon County.

"Agriculture is the cornerstone of our rural economy. Everywhere you turn, you see the pride and stewardship of Pennsylvania's farmers. I have witnessed this pride firsthand on my farm visits, and at Ag Progress Days. Your hard work and dedication to providing a quality standard of living for your family and rural community shows in all that you do -- from your farm, to the product you produce."

— U.S. Senator Harris Wofford

Senator Wofford has:

* Cosponsored legislation to ease the financial effects of the drought
* Submitted testimony on the low milk prices
* Supported the 1992 Ag Budget which included the Extension Service, 4-H, and various commodity programs.

Saul High Visits Penn State

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Students from the junior class at Philadelphia's Walter Biddle Saul High School of Agricultural Science learned about the diversity of career options in agriculture on a visit to Penn State's College of Agriculture recently.

"The trip provides high school students with a chance to see what a college campus is like and learn what opportunities a college education can bring them," said Dr. Marianne Houser, coordinator of undergraduate recruitment in Penn State's College of Agriculture. "We hope the trip will encourage the students to further their studies."

Saul, the largest specialized agricultural high school in the United States, attracts urban students throughout Philadelphia who are interested in agriculture. To attend, students must pass entrance examinations and demonstrate abilities in science and agriculture. In addition to English, math and science, they study subjects such as embryology, agronomy, and horticulture.

In 1989, the College of Agriculture officially "adopted" Saul High School as part of the School District of Philadelphia's "Adopt-a-School" program. Under the agreement, Penn State helps Saul students — many of whom come from inner-city neighborhoods — find careers and educational opportunities in the agricultural sciences.

The 65 students took guided walking tours of the campus and attended a luncheon program with university faculty and administrative staff. Saul alumni now enrolled in the College of Agriculture spoke at the luncheon about why they decided to attend Penn State and discussed the challenges and opportunities offered by a college education.

In the afternoon, the Saul students attended educational activities, lectures, and tows. Some visited the Cocoa greenhouse, where they learned about cocoa biotechnology and how the plant makes it from the plantation to candy bars and other products.

Dr. Douglas Furtek, assistant professor of food science, and Dr. Stephanie Doores, associate professor of food science, talked about how cocoa plants can be altered at the molecular level to produce desired flavors.

Others toured one of the most advanced horticultural research facilities in the country. Mark Rose, Ph.D. candidate and greenhouse technician, demonstrated the latest computer technology for monitoring and controlling light, irrigation, and fertilization.

Additional tours featured animal science, using computers in landscape contracting and agricultural and biological engineering. Students also visited the deer and blue duiker research center, Beaver Stadium, and the Penn State Bookstore.

Two-State Vegetable Meetings A First

NEWARK, Del. — Vegetable growers in Delaware and Maryland have a new educational event to meet their interests.

The first Delaware-Maryland vegetable meeting will be held Thursday and Friday, Decewmber 12 and 13, at the Wicomico Youth and Civic Center in Salisbury, Md.

According to Ed Kee, University of Delaware Cooperative Extension vegetable specialist, a host of organizations from both states helped plan the meetings.

The universities of Delaware and Maryland Cooperative Extension, the Maryland Vegetable Growers Association, the Delaware Vegetable Growers Association, the Delaware Potato Growers Association, the Delaware Direct Market Association, and the Peninsula Horticulture Society are official sponsors.

"There are several state and county vegetable meetings in the region," Kee said. "Last March a group of us, including growers, agricultural businesses and extension personnel, agreed to combine forces and try a two-state, regional program format. If this meeting is successful, we'll do it every two or three years, returning to the local program format during the off years."

Extension specialists from the region and beyond will present information on water quality issues, disease and pest control, and marketing strategies.

For a complete program, contact Ed Kee at (302) 856-7303 or any county extension office in Delaware or Maryland.

For over 129 years Gehl Company has been a leader in the design and construction of quality farm machinery This tradition of innovative design and durable construction is evident in the full line of economical box spreaders from Gehl With five sizes Gehl has the box spreader to fit your operation

Gehl-Tuff floor keeps manure moving

A good example of the innovative design in Gehl s box spreader is the Gehl-Tuff gel-coated fiber reinforced plywood floor The top surface has an extra slippery coating The coating is integrated with the underlying woven fiberglass which in turn is heat bonded to the top and bottom of the plywood This creates a smooth slick seamless panel The result is a specially constructed floor with top and bottom sealed against liquids and their acids to virtually eliminate decay and delamination

Handles the big loads

These full capacity spreaders can take a big load Heaped capacities range from 135 to 425 bushels Optional splash guards and side rails add 14 percent more capacity while protecting the sides from damage by front-end loaders The optional hydraulic endgate rests in front of the beater paddles to secure sloppy loads and keep heaped material out of the beater until you re ready to spread

Unmatched durability

Each Gehl box spreader features an A frame hitch made of high strength steel This hitch connects to the axle to prevent twisting of the box while transporting or spreading in rough terrain

The spreader sides are made from Gehl Steel a tough corrosive resistant material The sides are smooth and straight - easier to keep clean than corrugated sides And since no liners are required there s no chance for rust-through caused by moisture trapped between the liner and the spreader sides or floor

A non corrosive high density polyethylene transmission shield provides long lasting protection of mechanical parts Because it s slicker than metal manure is left in your fields not stuck to the shielding

10-year warranty

All Gehl spreaders are built to last They carry a full 10 year warranty on the floor and sides

Dependable Gehl Spreaders carry the load

Scavenger® II. With A Gehl Scavenger® II you can spread liquids, semi-solids, pen-packed, even frozen manure. A special feature is the heavy-duty patented square-tube auger that can be powered both up and down hydraulically to prevent bridging and cut through winter freeze-ups. See your Gehl dealer for more details.
